Trucker Declares Motorist Was on Wrong Side; Three Witnesses Blame Him.

A 65-year-old Ashley resident was killed near Mansfield early today when a motor transport truck upset and turned over on a light sedan, crushing the auto under a 12,000-pound load of steel shafts for airplane propellers

Killed was Charles F. Crump, 65, an assembler, employed at the J. and B. Mfg. company in Mansfield. He was on his way to work at the time of the accident at 6:40 a m one mile and a half south of Lexington on U S route 42

State highway patrolmen said Smith's automobile and an Inter-State Transport truck driven by William E. Ross, 34, of Grand Rapids, Mich., sideswiped on the highway. The truck ran off the highway and as the front end struck the ditch, the trailer toppled over on Crump's auto, shearing off the front end of the vehicle.

Crump's body was removed from the car through a door which was left intact by the crash Dr. L B McCullough, Richland county coroner, said he was killed instantly.

CITY BLACKOUT RULES UP FOR STUDY TONIGHT

Council Considers Ordinance Giving Mayor Powers To Issue Special Orders.

SETS UP PENALTIES

Authorizes Alarms, Clearing of Streets and Darkening of Visible Lights.

Blackout and air raid regulations for Mansfield residents will be presented to city council for study at its regular May meeting today at 8 p. m, but no immediate action on them is anticipated

Leslie K Wagner, city solicitor, said today that council would be given legislation authorizing Mayor W. J. Locke to promulgate special orders for blackout and air raid precautions but that he expected no action at the meeting "because there was no immediate need."

The city solicitor said that the legislation would probably be referred to one of council's committees for study and that action would take place either at a special session or at the regular June meeting.

The ordinance being presented to council would allow Mayor Locke to issue special orders for the carrying out of blackouts and air raid protective measures

Accompanying the ordinance, which is a stereotyped form which has been used in several other cities, will be a list of suggested orders which the mayor would announce almost immediately after council gave him his wartime powers.

Persons violating any of the clauses of the ordinance authorizing the mayor to exert wartime powers or any of the special rules and regulations promulgated by the mayor would be subject to $500 fine for each offense.

Listed among the special orders would be measures for handling traffic, the evacuation of civilians,

London Reports Little Resistance In Drive On Naval Base; Nazis Declare Fight Continues After 36 Hours; Commandos Lead Attack.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—A Reuters dispatch quoting a Vichy news agency said today that Marshal Petain and Admiral Darlan, chief of the armed forces, have sent a message to the commander in chief at Madagascar urging the troops "to resist attack and defend the honor of the French flag."

(By Associated Press)

Bitter fighting was reported raging today on the north end of 1,000-mile-long French Madagascar, the world's fourth largest island, as British sea-borne "invasion" forces attacked toward the Diego Suarez naval base after a surprise landing.

London military quarters said the British, striking to forestall a threatened Axis attempt to seize the strategic territory, had captured a French battery.

A German broadcast said there had been French casualties and that fighting continued more than 36 hours after British troops landed early yesterday at Courier bay, 10 miles across the isthmus from Diego Suarez.

The broadcast said it was not known yet whether the British landing operations had succeeded, and added:

"The French government may be expected to react most sharply. Its military effect probably will become manifest during the course of the day."

There was no immediate indication whether Japanese naval units, the nearest Axis striking force, were en route to dispute the British coup.

A Japanese armada of three battleships, five aircraft carriers, and flotillas of destroyers as well as cruisers was recently reported operating in the Bay of Bengal.

German dispatches said British naval and air forces first appeared off Diego Suarez yesterday and that Gov. Gen. Armand Annet rejected a seven-hour ultimatum. The British attack then started.

British military quarters said the landing was executed about 3 a m British time (9 p. m. Monday, Eastern War Time.)

DNB, the German news agency, reported that a French submarine

2,991 NAMES ON NAVY DEATH LIST

Reports 123 Ohioans, Four From Richland County Area, Lost Their Lives.

The Navy department in Washington today revealed the names of 123 Ohioans, including four from the Richland county area, in its first list of war dead—a roll of 2,991 names of sailors, marines and coastguardsmen who lost their lives in the period from Dec 7 to April 15.

Most of the casualties were incurred at Pearl Harbor, although the list included victims of accidents in the United States and in theaters of war.

The News-Journal has previously carried stories about the four men from this area who were acknowledged dead by the Navy department They were:

George Robert Embreus, son of Mike Embreus of Ashland, lost in February when destroyer on which he was storekeeper was sunk, Finch Woodrow Clemens, machinists' mate, nephew of A. D. McKellar of Crestline, who was aboard the Jacob Jones.

Frederick Franklin Sulser, a gunner's mate, who was the son of Franklin Sulser, of Galion, James Henry Hixson, apprentice seaman son of Harry S Hixson of Wooster.

17,205 Consumers Register For Sugar On Opening Day

For 20 per cent of Richland county's population, sugar today went back on the list of commodities the consumer can purchase at the corner store

But from now on it takes more than money to buy sugar anywhere. The purchaser must present to the dealer a ration book, which authorizes the purchase of a supply that is limited to one half pound a week per person.

Of 17,205 persons who registered at elementary schools of the county in the first afternoon and evening of sugar registration Monday, 15,589 were issued ration books. The 1,616 others must wait to obtain their books from their rationing board at a later date, because their supply on hand exceeded six pounds per person.

For those with a supply on hand between two pounds—the individual allowance, and six pounds, one of the 28 stamps in the book was removed for each pound of sugar over two pounds.

Rationing and school authorities reported that the registration was proceeding smoothly, and that registrants as a whole were patient and cooperative despite the waiting that was necessary at some schools.

Registration continues this afternoon and evening, for those whose surnames start from F to K The A-to-E group was register-

BACK DOOR: Japs Strike Into China 80 Miles Above Lashio

(By United Press)

CHUNGKING — Powerful Japanese mechanized units forced open the back door to China today, climaxing a three-month drive through Burma by crossing the Chinese frontier into Yunnan province.

A Chinese military spokesman announced shortly after 3 p. m. that enemy spearheads had crossed the border near the town of Wanting on the Burma road about 80 miles above captured Lashio.

Although some enemy troops have penetrated as far as two miles into Chinese territory, the spokesman said the town of Wanting and Wanting bridge separating China and Burma, still were in Chinese hands

It is 116 miles over the winding Burma road from the Lashio railhead to Wanting From the border it is only 300 airline miles to the Burma road's northern terminus at Kunming and about 675 miles to the free China capital of Chungking.

The spokesman said the Chinese were "holding up" in the Wantung area and expressed doubt that the Japanese would attempt a deep penetration into Yunnan province. The next enemy move, he said, likely would be a drive on Bhamo, 110 miles north of Mandalay, in an attempt to isolate the Chinese from the remaining British forces.

The spokesman did not elaborate, but he revealed that Chinese forces already have begun a cam-

Mayor Calls Upon Mansfielders To Walk, Save Tires

"I don't believe it would be too great a hardship for every person in Mansfield to walk to work each morning"

With these words, Mayor W J Locke today started a campaign to get Mansfielders to rely upon shoe leather rather than automobile tires to get around town as part of a program to conserve the supply of tires for defense needs.

Mayor Locke announced the new campaign this morning as a result of a state-wide conference of Ohio mayors held yesterday in Columbus for the purpose of solving wartime transportation problems. The mayor and Municipal Judge G E Kalbfleisch, chairman of the civilian defense committee, represented Mansfield at the meeting.

"In some cases, it may be ne-

Burglar Suspect Faces Jury; Hunt Opens For Helper

A 25-year-old Mansfield colored youth, captured in the Atlantic and Pacific company's supermarket on Bowman street early yesterday, was arraigned in municipal court on burglary charges this morning while police sought an accomplice who they believe may have joined him in a series of 14 burglaries within the past month.

Ernest Burke, 529 Lily street, who eluded capture by hiding in the market for almost three hours, pleaded guilty when arraigned before Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch and was bound over to the Richland county grand jury on $1,500 bond.

Burke was captured at 12:55 a. m. yesterday by a second detail of officers, sent to the market after a search by a first detail starting at 10:16 p. m. Sunday had failed to find him.

Police Chief Thomas M. Bell said that he had questioned Police Lieut. Carl Kalstein and Patrolman Donald Mitchell, who made the first search for Burke. Bell said that the facts brought out in the talk indicated that an in-

WPB Bans Use Of Iron, Steel In Making Of Everyday Items

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The iron and steel that go into the product of peaceful and pleasant living today were ordered poured into the crucibles of war.

General conservation order M-126, the most sweeping yet issued by the war production board, directs thousands of manufacturing plants to stop within 90 days all use of the metals needed for war.

Manufacturers of more than 400 common products in every day use were affected, along with thousands of wholesalers, distributors, jobbers, retailers and all their employes.

The consuming public was warned against receiving articles known to have been produced in violation of the order, and violation was made a crime, punishable by fine or imprisonment.

The order was regarded as a knockout blow to the durable goods industry. Any plant that can not shift to the manufacture of war materials must shut down for the duration. There were some exceptions, such as the making of certain articles needed for repair or maintenance work, hospital equipment, etc., but the overall effect was to ban the manufacture of such common products as bath tubs, cash registers, cigaret lighters, mail boxes, fountain pens, pie plates, waste baskets, tea pots, swivel chairs, slide fasteners, voting machines, and all novelties and souvenirs and Christmas tree ornaments.

When present stocks are exhausted the handyman around the house will have to fashion his own fixtures — saws, hammers and screw drivers were excepted from the list.

SPREAD: RAF Raids Range To Stuttgart, Vichy, Skoda Works

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—Russian attacks in the Kursk, Kharkov and Taganrog sectors of the southern front were reported today in circumstances which suggested a major Soviet offensive might have started before the Germans were able to launch one of their own.

(By Associated Press)

British warplanes heavily bombed the great Skoda armament works at Pilsen in Nazi-occupied former Czechoslovakia before dawn today, dropped flares and leaflets over Vichy, capital of unoccupied France, and attacked the big war foundries city of Stuttgart in southwest Germany.

Stuttgart, with a population of 500,000, is the reported headquarters of the Bosch electrical works, the Daimler and Benz airplane engine factories, and other vital military targets.

A German broadcast said that the RAF "attacked" Vichy with incendiary bombs and that French anti-aircraft batteries went into action, but Vichy dispatches said the planes merely dropped propaganda and observation flares.

The raiders also flew over Clermont-Ferrand, 30 miles from Vichy.

Other RAF planes, carrying out a widespread series of night attacks, pounded the docks at Nantes, France, and bombed shipping off the coasts of Holland and Norway.

1,200 Retailers Meet Here To Study Ceilings On Prices

Approximately 1,200 retailers from Mansfield and surrounding communities are expected to attend a meeting in Mansfield tomorrow at 8 p. m to receive instructions on the new price ceiling regulations ordered by the Office of Price Administration and which go into effect May 18.

The meeting, to be attended by retailers from Mansfield, Shelby, Ashland, Galion, Crestline, Mt. Vernon and other communities, will be held in John Simpson auditorium with Mayor W. J. Locke acting as chairman.

At the session, an official of the OPA will address the retailers and will be prepared to answer questions and discuss details of the new price ceiling regulations.

Mayor Locke said today that he had been contacted by OPA officials and asked to make arrangements for and to preside at the Mansfield meeting, one of a series of sectional conferences designed to educate and prepare retailers for compliance with the new general maximum price regulations.

Birkett L. Williams, regional administrator of the OPA, in announcing the Mansfield meeting, said:

"From all reports, the indication is that the retail trade as a whole wishes to cooperate in every way. The discussions at the meeting will make this possible with a minimum of confusion and misunderstanding."

FRENCH FIGHT BRITISH WHEN TROOPS LAND

Commandos Lead Seizure of Madagascar to Foil Axis Plans.

and a tender had been sunk at Madagascar resisting the British landing.

French reservists were said to have been called up, with orders to fight the British.

The island, 800 miles off the east coast of South Africa, commands Allied sea lanes to the Middle East, India and China.

A British war office communique said the landing force consisted of regular troops and a small contingent of "special service troops"—identified as commandos—and met little opposition.

"Our forces have landed at Courier bay, covered by naval aircraft, with the intention of proceeding across the isthmus to the naval base at Diego Suarez," the British communique said.

"It is hoped that the French authorities will accept the offer of the United Nations to help in defense of the island against Axis aggression."

A Washington statement last night declared the dawn landing was made with "the full approval and support of the government of the United States," and hinted at active American military aid against resistance, announcing:

"Any warlike act permitted by the French government against the government of Great Britain or the government of the United States would, of necessity, have to be regarded by the government of the United States as an attack upon the United Nations as a whole."

The British declared bluntly the coup was executed to prevent Japanese seizure of Madagascar, now that France's pro-Axis Premier Pierre Laval directs the Vichy regime.

A Tokyo broadcast commented angrily:

"The Madagascar occupation is a direct aggression against Vichy . . . and is bound to result in a further cooling of Vichy's relations with the United Nations and bring closer co-operation between Berlin and Italy."

The broadcast quoted "competent quarters" as asserting that "the latest action by the United Nations was made in an attempt to advertise the fact that the Allies are opening a second front, which, however, they will be unable to carry out because the Allies lack men, shipping bottoms and materials."

Both Washington and London announcements made it clear that the occupation would not intentionally interfere with the French status of Madagascar and that the island would be "held in trust for France" against threatened Axis aggression.

British commandos led the landing on the small, mangrove-bordered shore of Courier bay, 10 miles across from the big Diego Suarez naval base, where the French cruisers Moncalm and Marseillaise and the submarine tender Jules Verne were reported to have arrived four days ago.

While the British expected little resistance, dispatches yesterday said Madagascar reservists were being called up.

A Japanese military mission was said to have been conferring recently with French authorities on the island, and Free French followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle were being rounded up and thrown into prison.

A German broadcast quoted Fernand de Brinon, Vichy French representative in Paris, as saying that French troops in the island had received orders to oppose the British.

London diplomatic quarters hailed the coup as having "greatly improved" the Allies' position in the Indian ocean, already brightened by the reported presence of the mighty new U. S. battleships Washington and North Carolina in those waters.

These quarters said the attack signalled an end of Allied attempts to coax Vichy away from German influence.

Circumstances suggested that the British beat Japan to the punch by a narrow margin, with Japanese Admirals Nomura and Abe recently active in Vichy amid indications that "yet further concessions by the Vichy government to the Axis and, in particular, to Japan" were imminent.

London Jubilant at Madagascar Move

LONDON — (INS) — There was jubilation everywhere in London today over announcement that British military and naval forces had occupied the French island of Madagascar.

The excitement was almost as great as if the British had landed invasion forces on the continent. Everyone expressed delight over the fact that the United Nations were first in the field this time and had beaten the Japanese in taking over the strategic Indian ocean island.

The British press joined with the populace in hailing the occupation.

The Evening News said the seizure had gained the United Nations a "new front."

"All of Britain will rejoice that the Allies moved first," said the Standard.

"This is the kind of action people have been calling for," declared the Evening Star.

From India, South Africa and other United Nations countries vitally concerned with the fate of Madagascar came messages of great satisfaction that direct and speedy action had been taken by the British.

for the auxiliary's rehabilitation work among ex-veterans and their families. Until this year the receipts have gone exclusively to aid the veterans and their families of World War 1. This year, according to a recent ruling of the national auxiliary, receipts may also be used for veterans and families of the current conflict.

As in previous years the auxiliary will place poppies in the various industries two weeks before the street sale begins. The latter will be in charge of both the Junior auxiliary and the Boy Scouts. Sellers will leave the Legion home early in the morning and return at noon to report and be guests of the auxiliary at lunch.

The Mothers club, headed by Mrs. Martha Gardner, will be in charge of preparations for the meal.

The poppies sold here were bought from the veterans at the Sandusky home at the cost of a penny each and it is from this money that the veterans are able to buy a few of the little things that will add to their own comfort as well as that of their family.

PITTSBURGH—(INS)—The eyes of the labor world were on Pittsburgh today where a show-down battle between forces of John L. Lewis and CIO President Philip Murray was expected to develop at the fifth annual convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union council.

Despite the keynote of "labor unity for American victory," union leaders were waiting with bated breath for Murray to address them sometime this afternoon. Neither John Phillips, president of the state CIO, nor Murray would reveal the nature of his talk.

Although representatives of Lewis' United Mine Workers will attend the four-day meeting, Phillips said that "as far as I know, Mr. Lewis will not be here. But he has the right to come if he wants to."

Vichy Omits Part of U. S. Communique

VICHY—(INS)—The Vichy news agency today published excerpts of the Washington communique announcing occupation of the island of Madagascar by United Nations forces but omitted important paragraphs, including one which referred to the danger to the United Nations which would have resulted from Japanese seizure.

Also missing was the phrase relating to the United Nations' fight to maintain the kind of civilization to which they and France long have been accustomed.

No official comment was included with publication of the communique.

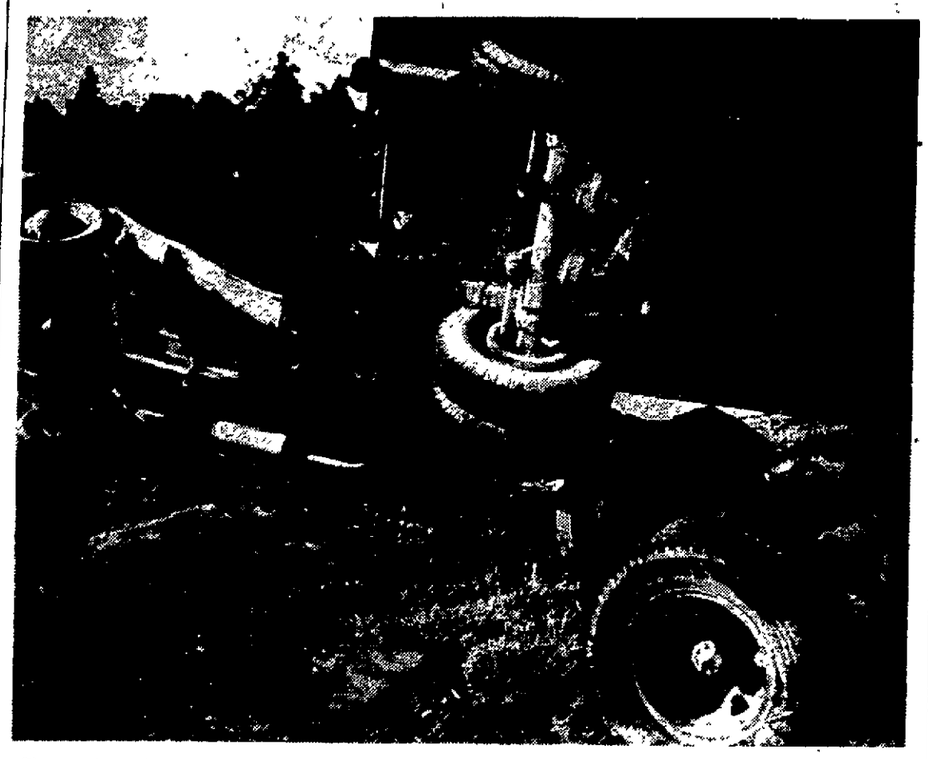
As Truck Crushed Auto, Killed Driver



Shown above is the wreckage of a truck-automobile crash which killed Charles F. Crump, 65-year-old Ashley resident early this morning on U. S. Route 42, south of Lexington. The picture shows Crump's automobile crushed under the truck's heavy trailer. Highway patrolmen said the two vehicles sideswiped on the highway before the truck upset.

His chest was crushed and his skull was fractured. The body was taken to the Snyder funeral home in Lexington.

County Prosecutor Harold T. Lutz ordered Ross held in county jail, pending investigation of the accident.

Highway patrolmen were confronted with conflicting statements as to responsibility for the crash.

Highway patrolmen said Ross told them that the car driven by Crump was on the wrong side of the highway and that he (Ross) swung his truck to the left side of the road to avoid hitting Crump's vehicle. They quoted him as saying that Crump suddenly saw he was onthe wrong side of the road and was on the wrong side of the road and started to turn his car to the right side. Ross then swerved his truck back to his side of the highway, but the sideswipe resulted. The truck struck the roadside ditch and the trailer then toppled over on the car.

Patrolmen said that conflicting with the trucker's statement were claims of three witnesses who said that Ross was driving on the wrong side of the highway and that as Crump pulled to the left to avoid hitting the truck, Jones pulled his truck over to the right where the vehicles came together.

Crump is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Crump and two daughters. The body was removed to Ashley pending funeral arrangements.

Chief Bell said that it is believed the man fleeing from the front of the store was an accomplice who may have been acting as a lookout. The chief also stated that he believed that Burke and the accomplice might be responsible for a series of thefts committed during the past month. Police claimed yesterday that Burke had admitted taking part in burglaries of the Bushnell school and the Red and White store on Main street during the past week.

Chief Bell said that police were seeking a Mansfield resident believed to be Burke's accomplice and that he would be held for investigation.

Mansfielders would be compelled to follow many air raid and blackout rules. Air raids would be announced by a chorus of factory whistles or sirens giving intermittent blasts for a 2-minute period. The all-clear signal would be another chorus of whistles in one two-minute blast.

Motorists would be compelled to pull their vehicles over to the curb, extinguish lights, turn off their motors, and leave their cars for safety shelters.

Home owners will be ordered to dim all lights which can be seen outside the homes or to place drapes or other coverings for windows, doors or other openings.

Persons giving unauthorized warnings of blackouts, air raids or all-clear signals would also be subject to a $500 fine as would persons displaying a civilian defense badge or emblem without authorization.

JAPS CLIMAX BURMA ATTACK, INVADE CHINA

Cross Border 80 Miles Above Lashio, Attempt to Isolate Chinese Expected.

paign of guerilla warfare on the Burma front.

Some observers interpreted this to mean that organized resistance in certain sectors would be abandoned for guerrilla tactics at which the Chinese have become adept during their clashes with the Japanese on the Nanking, Changsha and other points.

The spokesman said guerrilla tactics were being carried out particularly in the Taunggyi area, 140 miles below Lashio, where a Chinese unit of undetermined strength has been attempting to sever enemy supply lines.

Military quarters here were undecided what would be the next Japanese move. There was speculation whether the enemy actually would attempt to drive into China or would concentrate next on capturing Bhamo, about 50 miles northwest of the probable point of the Japanese border crossing and 110 miles above Mandalay.

The border crossing represented at least a 20-mile Japanese advance from the Kutkai area where the last Chungking communique had reported severe fighting was raging. The Japanese attack Kutkai following a Saturday advance from Kewlchien, 58 miles north of Lashio.

Two other enemy columns were on the move in unconquered northern Burma, one stabbing northwestward from Mandalay along the Chindwin river within 150 miles of the Indian frontier.

(The all-India radio, heard in London, reported a new American bombing attack on the Rangoon area in lower Burma. It said direct hits were scored on runways and buildings at an enemy airdrome at Mingaladon following Sunday night's attack on the Rangoon dock area. The raid was the fourth by American bombers on enemy bases in the Irrawaddy delta.)

Raids Presage New Philippine Drive

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Resumption of heavy assaults on Manila bay forts and new landings in Mindanao were believed today to be indications that the Japanese were beginning a campaign to wipe out the remaining American-Filipino resistance in the Philippines.

After the fall of Bataan there was a comparative lull in the Manila bay area while the Japanese attacked the Visayan islands of Cebu and Panay. That action led to belief that the Japanese might be preparing to lay siege to Corregidor rather than attempt a direct assault.

Corregidor represented what military observers here believed was a far more difficult system of defense to storm than did the island of Hongkong and Singapore.

The renewed intense attacks on Corregidor's Fort Mills, and the neighboring Forts Drum, Hughes and Frank, made it look now as though an effort to land and overwhelm the defenders may be attempted.

Bombs Rip Two Big Jap Pacific Bases

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia — (U.P.) — Two of Japan's biggest invasion bases have been strewn with blazing wreckage by United States flying fortresses, Catalina-Consolidated medium bombers and fighter planes in one of their most ferocious attacks, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

Early reports from advanced American bases indicated that up to 30 Japanese planes were destroyed or damaged. Supply dumps were blown up, big fires were left eating their way through airdrome installations and runways and troops were bombed and machine gunned.

Rabaul, in New Britain island, the most dangerous Japanese base in the Australian zone, and Lae in New Guinea were the targets.

Brig. Gen. Martin F. Scanlon, 52, of Scranton, Pa., veteran of two wars with the United States army air corps, led the raid on Rabaul, flying a giant flying fortress.

New cannon-firing fighter planes made the raid on Lae.

In his communique, No. 15 issued from his southwest Pacific general headquarters, MacArthur announced also that United States fighter planes had damaged four Japanese bombers and one navy zero fighter of a formation of nine heavy bombers and 10 zeros which tried to attack the Allied base at Port Moresby, New Guinea.

So promptly did American and Australian interceptor planes rise, the enemy fleet did not even reach the airdrome. MacArthur described the raid as without effect.

In their Rabaul raid the American bombers officially claimed three enemy planes blown to pieces by direct hits. An airdrome area on which 20 planes were dispersed was plastered with bombs.

Grounded Japanese planes were damaged by fighter planes in their raid on Lae.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Murder On the Avenue

By Carolyn Wells

CHAPTER I

It was not a large party, but almost every one there had been proud to get an invitation. For the somewhat taciturn Hugh McCleod and his lovely kitten-faced wife, Alma, were high spots in New York society although they neither sought for nor cared about that accolade.

"Why do you build?" asked Ogden Murray. "There are hundreds of houses on Long Island, just right for you two."

"No," Alma said, with her usual decided air, "we don't want a ready-made house, it must be built according to our own plans. Hugh and I have talked it over and over——"

"Why does building require so much talking?" Van Dykes Haynes inquired, in his drawling voice. "If you want a house, just say what you want and have it built. Why talk about it day and night? I am an architect and I know."

"You may know for yourself, Van," Murray checked him, "but for most people, building, if it is to be a success, must be talked about. It must be planned carefully and discussed with experts. It takes a lot of talk, look at the Tower of Babel!"

"Better look up your Scripture lessons," Alma laughed "It was the chatter at the outset that prevented that tower being built."

"Well, it doesn't matter. I say, Alma, let me drive you out to look at a few houses, before you decide—"

"Talk to Hugh about it. If he'll consent to buy a used house, I'll agree."

Alma smiled the subject away and opened another. But nobody cared; so long as she talked, and smiled, subjects were of little consequence.

The big Park Avenue apartment was duplex and the floors were connected by a graceful stairway of white marble. The appointments were modified modernistic, the modernism being by reason of Alma's insistence and the modification because of Hugh's Scotch doggedness.

The McCleods though apparently ill-matched, were happy enough. Hugh was big and bold and sometimes boisterous; Alma was frail, morally and physically, but she was very lovely.

Their home was the mecca of many social pilgrims, but it was reached only by those who were worth because of some attainment of merit or some charm of personality. Climbers seldom made the grade and mere wealth cut no ice whatever.

"Where is Brand Herrick?" Murray asked. "Oh, here he comes, with Nadine, as always."

"Is that true, Brand?" Alma said, as Herrick reached her side. "Are you always with Nadine?"

"Not when I can be with you, darling."

"Take him off my hands, Alma, do. I'm awfully tired of him" This from Nadine Glenn, who thought herself a glamor girl, and with good reason.

She was the serpent type She writhed, very slightly but effectively. She was a languid brunette with heavy-lidded eyes.

Alma was that rare combination, a blond with a real mentality.

Brand Herrick admired them both, but he often realized, to his amazement, that when he was with one, he invariably wished he might be with the other. Nadine was deeply in love with him, and Alma seemed to be. But Herrick shrewdly suspected that Alma's interest in him was more to annoy Nadine than because of her own sentiments.

He was a clever lawyer, and his gay good nature made him a general favorite.

There were rumors of a fabulously rich uncle in the western wilds, whose heir Brand might be some day.

Doris Day was an odd combination of a wilful child and a capable and helpful friend. She was 23, but loked about 17, until she found a chance to do something for somebody, and then she seemed mature and very wise Her lack of malice set her apart from most of her associates.

She came to Alma and said softly

"Who is that girl, over by the palm bush?"

"I've no idea," her hostess answered. "I never saw her before. She must have come with somebody."

The girl seemed alone, stranded, in fact, and kind-hearted. Doris went to her.

"Come along to the bar," she invited. "Are you with the Laings?"

"No" When the girl smiled she looked attractive. But she was so evidently a stranger, and she seemed dubious about going with Doris.

Then she said, "You think I'm a fish out of water, don't you? Well, I am. Miss Malcolm brought me, and then she went to look at a picture. I'm waiting for her. I'd like a cocktail."

She seemed almost wistful, and Doris kissed her.

"Come along," she said. "What you need is some fun. What's your name?"

The girl laughed.

"You're like a St. Bernard," she said, "and I'm the lost traveler! My name is Una Deane—"

"Of course!" exclaimed Doris, "I should have known! It couldn't be anything else."

"Why couldn't it? What do you mean? I've never seen you before."

"No; but you are so perfectly a Una Deane, from top to toe."

"Oh, I see. You mean I'm not —not smart, not glamorous."

Doris looked at her. "That's a true bill," she said, "but those things can be put right. And, if I had meant them, I should not have said them."

"No; I ought to have known that. Forgive me. Just what did you mean?"

"Only that your name suits you. You have that gentle look that a Una should have and your quiet, unafraid yet shy manner is of the Deanes."

"You are clever and you are very kind. Ought I to go with you? Miss Malcolm may expect me to be here when she comes back."

"Who is Miss Malcolm? What is she?"

"She is Miss Martha Malcolm."

"What! You don't mean Martha Malcolm, the painter?"

"Of course. I am a student in the Atterbury School of Design, she is there often, and she is my friend."

"You're a lucky girl' Martha Malcolm is a 'power. Come on, she'll find you But you'll be better for a cocktail"

They found a gay crowd at the bar and Doris introduced her new find as a protege of Martha Malcolm The effect of this and the added effect of a well-selected cocktail gave Una a new confidence in herself. Ogden Murray looked at her twice and came to sit beside her. Van Dyke Haynes waxed chummy, whereupon Nadine looked offended and said

"Come on, Van; I want to dance." He went with her

Martha Malcolm came to the bar.

"Oh, here you are, Una," she said, smiling at the happy-looking girl. "Wait a minute till I have me a drink, and then I want to take you to meet our hostess She is a dear and will adore you. 'Fraid I forgot about you, but you seem to have landed on your feet"

"Yes, Miss Malcolm, I'm enjoying the party — as you prophesied"

"So I did. Now let me see—where is Alma? Anybody know?"

"Let me take Miss Deane," offered Ogden Murray. "You stay here, Miss Malcolm. I'll hunt out Alma and present Miss Deane in your name."

"Yes, do, Ogden. And find Hugh too I want Una to meet him"

"'Tis the same as done. Will you come, Miss Deane, and," he added, as they walked away, "if you'll let me call you Una, I'll—"

He paused, for the girl was laughing at him

"Sorry," she said, "but you've got your lines wrong! Or have you? Miss Malcolm told me that the men here would be hilariously informal, and would call me Una at first sight and probably darling—"

"Yes, I meant to—I do mean to, but you see—"

"You mean, I am not in the know, and you're uncertain just how I'll take you."

"Exactly Now you tell me how you want me. Ultra formal, just medium or a rackety pal."

Una laughed "Medium, please," she said; "at first, anyhow, and then if you want to, I can adjust the gauge Tell me a little more about Miss Malcolm, won't you? I've never seen her social side before. I've only known her in the classes"

"She's an important woman. Does work in many fields, in war, in peace and among her countrymen. But she's eccentric."

"Not in her manner?"

"Not exactly, though she is a little informal. We all are, but it seems odd in her. Then she makes queer friends."

"Like me?"

Murray looked at her reprovingly.

"Don't be silly!" he said. "It doesn't suit you. You are—"

She interrupted him "Never mind about me, tell me something about the McCleods. Quick, before we reach them."

"No orders. Just keep your gentleness and simplicity and don't try to be smart."

"As if I would!"

"Oh, yes, you would. And I'm afraid you will. But don't. I want you to be friends with Alma. She can do a lot for you."

"I don't choose friends because of what they can do for me."

"Well, you ought to. Anyway, do in this case. Alma McCleod can give you far more pleasure than Martha Malcolm."

They're both Scotch, aren't they?"

"Oh, no. Miss Malcolm is of Scotch stock, but Alma is Hugh's wife, you know. He's Scotch, of course. Oh, here we are."

Alma, having come through a doorway, stood in front of them, and Murray made the introduction.

"How delightful," Alma said, and her tone was sincere. "Miss Malcolm told me of you and I was about to look you up. Tell me, do you live in the city?"

"Yes, I am in the classes with Miss Malcolm. She made me very happy, bringing me here tonight."

"I hope you will come again—often. And here is my husband. Hugh, this is Miss Deane, a friend of Martha's, and now a friend of ours"

"How do you do, Miss Deane? Good of you to come. You looking after her, Murray? Yes, yes. Sorry, Miss Deane, but I have a matter to attend to. I must go. See you when I come back, soon, yes, yes,—soon, I'm sure."

He grasped Una's hand a moment, and then went quickly away.

She looked up at Murray and found him watching her. Alma had disappeared.

"He's very much in earnest," she said, thoughtfully.

"Think so? Why?"

"Oh, his manner, and his haste."

"He's always like that; it's just his way."

"It isn't a Scotch way."

"That doesn't matter. It's Hugh's way. I say, I thought you took things as they came"

"I do. And I'm glad you checked up on me. But you see things are coming strangely tonight. I mean they're strange to me. You are used to all this touch and go, this off and on, this—"

"Hit or miss."

"Yes, that's it! It all seems hit or miss to me, but I know it doesn't to you who are used to it."

"Aren't you going to get used to it?"

"If I can, yes"

"Good for you! I was afraid you'd be above it."

"Me!" Above it? Why, I'm not above anything!"

"Tut, tut, don't put on airs. You're a many-sided polygon, and one or two of your sides I don't like."

"If I knew which they were I should cultivate them and emphasize them I don't want to be a many-sided paragon!"

"I didn't say—"

"I know what you said And there wasn't much sense to it. Now, I think you're tired of me and I know I'm tired of you, so if you'll take me back to the dressing-room, I think I'll go home, and you can tell Miss Malcolm I've gone, for I don't want to hurry her off so early"

"Early? It's well after two, nearly three. A nice time for a girl to go home alone"

"Rubbish! I shall take a taxi. I am not afraid"

"Oh, very well' Then, since you are leaving me and are making no plans for a future meeting, I am going to kiss you"

"No, you are not going to kiss me Men kiss me only when I want them to, and I do not want you to Do I have to say good night to Mrs. McCleod?"

"As you like. She's over there. It would be a graceful gesture."

"She looks beautiful, doesn't she? She's so white, svelte, swaying,—but secretly alert"

"My dear child, you are not old enough to read character in that mad fashion' Has Martha been telling you of Mrs McCleod?"

"Oh, no. I've done it all my life Most people carry their characters in plain sight on their faces"

"Do I?"

"Not so much as most But, as I said, you are tired of me, and yet you hang on thinking I may yet prove interesting"

"You witch! That would have been true ten minutes ago, but since then I found a new interest in you!"

"What is it?"

"Don't tell me you have anything so commonplace as curiosity in that pretty little head of yours!"

"No, and you wouldn't gratify it if I had Tell me, is Alma in love with that granite statue?"

"Meaning Hugh McCleod? He's no statue, he's a bending willow wand. He's a mush of concession; he's ready to do anything anybody asks of him."

"Yes, but that's only his honest liking to do things for other people out of kindness of his heart. If he has a grievance or is asked to do anything against his will, he is adamant in his refusal."

"You're making up now, trying to interest me."

"Have you ever had occasion to see Mr. McCleod in such case?"

Murray looked thoughtful and remained silent.

"I am answered," Una Deane said. "And now I want to go home. Take me to the bar, please, and give me a drink and I daresay Miss Malcolm will be glad to go home too."

"I will obey, if you will just tell me I may see you again, if only to learn if my first impressions need correction."

"I hope they will, for I'm quite sure your thoughts of me are not complimentary."

"You think that! Oh, how mistaken you are!"

"Very well, then I think we shall meet again."

"When? Where?"

"That must depend on chance. Don't you dare arrange a meeting! That would spoil the whole game."

And then they were in the presence of Miss Malcolm, and she was quite ready to go home, and Una Deane went with her.

The party was picturesque.

Those on the upper floor could look down on the gay scene in the rotunda and those below could look up and see their friends smiling at them over the circular railing.

Light, flowers and music made the atmosphere pleasurable and most of the guests were enjoying themselves.

Foo Chow, the Chinese butler came near McCleod and made a slight movement of his eyebrows. Hugh stepped toward him, and waited for his message.

Foo Chow had been with the McCleods all their married life, four years, and his work and his attitudes were nothing short of perfection. In a low voice he told his master that Miss Emmy wished to see him.

"My father?' said Hugh, quickly.

"Yessir, I think that is it."

Hugh was on his way. Foo Choo had found him in the upper hall, and he at once left the group he was with, went through his own bedroom and into a tiny hall from which a spiral stair led upward.

Hugh's father, Angus McCleod, and Miss Emily, Hugh's sister, lived in a smaller apartment just above his own. The old man was an invalid and subject to sinking spells, any one of which might be his last. He had been fairly well of late, but Hugh realized the seriousness of the occasion. He had his own key, and in a moment he was in his sister's presence.

"A bad attack?" he asked.

"Yes," Emily told him. "Is Doctor Larkin downstairs?"

"No, he has gone home. It's half past two"

"Yes, I know, and I think we needn't send for him, Dunn has given father his drops, and unless he gets worse, I shall not feel alarmed."

"I'll dismiss the crowd, Emmy, if you think there's danger of—"

"No, he won't die tonight—unless there's a sudden change. It would be awful to send the people away! Alma—"

"Alma will do as I tell her. Let me take a look at father. Is he asleep?"

They went to the bedroom and as Hugh approached, Angus opened his eyes.

"Amaist gane," he whispered. "Awell, 'tis a' recht. Whur's Dunn?"

"Here sir," and the man servant, who was also nurse, stepped to the bedside.

He too was a Scotchman, and an old retainer. But he used no Scotch lingo, and indeed, Angus McCleod did not, when he was feeling well. They often judged the extent of his attack by the broadness of his dialect

Dunn turned to Hugh. "He'll come out of this," he said. "Often he's been a deal worse, and all right again in the morning. Leave him to me, sir, I'll guarantee him a night's rest that'll last till tomorrow noon, I'm thinkin' "

"It looks like it," Hugh agreed. "But he talked very Scotchy."

"He does that more, of late," Emily said. "He won't last very long, Hugh."

"I know, Emmy dear, and I'll do just as you say about the party."

"Let it go on. I'm sure many of them will go soon; it's only Alma's particular crowd who stay on and on—and on! Now, you go back, Hugh, and say nothing to any one, not even to Alma, or the servants. You can come back once in a while, and then I'll know whether we ought to send for the doctor."

Emmy was the older, and Hugh had always obeyed her. And too, he thought her view of it all was sensible and her advice wise.

He went down the steep little steps into his own bedroom. When home, he took an apartment above he came to live in his spacious his for his father and sister, and had the communicating stairway built in. He loved his people and though Alma was not affectionate with them, she was always kindly and ready to do anything she could for their pleasure.

Emmy tried honestly to establish sisterly relations, but she was 47 and Hugh's wife was 26, too great a gulf of time to be successfully bridged.

But, though having little in common, the two women were clever enough to invent a sort of make-believe friendship which passed for the real thing, even among those most interested. There never was any friction; they deferred to each other's tastes and wishes, and none but themselves knew what a trifle it would take to demolish the air castle of affection they had built so cautiously.

Even Hugh, who realized their incompatibility, assumed that they were as friendly as most sisters-in-law, and he felt satisfied.

Hugh sat for a time in his room, thinking what must happen when his father died. He could see no plan but to have his sister live in his home. But he had a lively recollection of one time when he had mentioned this to Alma. It was not a pleasant memory, and he did not dwell on it. He sighed, and then he rose from his easy chair and went to rejoin his guests.

Half way down the marble staircase he saw that a number of people had left. Those still there had seemed to gather into groups, and one of the groups centered about his wife.

Alma was surrounded by her intimates, and she was at her very best. Hugh stared at her as if he had never seen her before. Indeed, as he often told her, he fell in love with her afresh every time he laid eyes on her.

And always she laughed and told him how happy it made her to hear it.

her, but he was not too near,

Van Dyke Haynes was nearest Alma would take care of that. Ogden Murray was hovering. Hugh had never seen him so attentive before. Doctor Lloyd was telling a story. Brand Herrick was walking away.

Hugh was glad to see the doctor there still. He was Alma's doctor, but if the old man should grow worse suddenly, he could be of aid.

MANSFIELD OHIO TUESDAY, MAY 5, 1942.

If tobacco is adjudged an essential war commodity there's at least the possibility of a 10-cent ceiling on a 5-cent cigar.

The president of Ohio State university says football has now "assumed secondary importance." Well of all things! And now what comes first? Can it be education?

The Day of Rationing

LONG talked of in the news columns, the day of rationing of sugar has arrived. Approximately a fourth of Richland county's residents had answered the questions of registrars by the time the first day of registration for sugar ration books closed at 9 o'clock last night.

The county's remaining other thousands will register at elementary schools today, Wednesday, or Thursday. Frozen for eight days, sugar sales were resumed today, with supplies available only to those who have obtained ration books, and only in the prescribed amount—one half pound per person per week.

Just like that—sugar rationing started today. And folks responded with a right good will, as well they might. But that attitude of co-operation and willingness which was apparent on every hand at the registration points wasn't strained or artificial. It again demonstrated the healthy democratic attitude of everyone doing his bit.

That's a good thing to see, even if Americans realize that they're living the life of Riley compared with what the Germans and English faced at the outbreak of the war in 1939.

Americans have felt the pinch so far on new automobiles and tires. Now it's sugar, and in some areas gasoline. And last night the War Production Board banned the use of iron and steel in 400 other articles of civilian use, after a 90-day grace period.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson looks for a gradual widening of the goods-apportioning program. He says the country is bound to run into some "important shortages" later and "naturally we will be prepared for rationing."

OPA officials point out, however, that today—after almost five months of war, the American people still have available virtually all the food, clothing, and non-essentials that money can buy.

Why We Must Make Our Tires Last

OCCASIONALLY one hears a story, which appears from nowhere, saying there is plenty of rubber, and that there is no sense in rationing tires and other rubber products.

These stories are started by Axis agents, and are passed on by innocent but talkative American citizens. They seek to discredit rubber rationing, and to shake confidence in our prosecution of the war on the home front.

The truth is the Japs have our rubber supply. Our industries have been cut off from the sources of 98 per cent of their crude rubber. While the need for rubber in civilian life continues, the need for rubber in war increases. If we must choose between the two outlets, the war uses must have preference.

With 98 per cent of our crude rubber supply cut off, it is apparent that we must search the nation, every cellar, attic and garage for old rubber which can be reclaimed. Even with this new source, we shall hardly have enough for war equipment.

Artificial rubber sources now being developed, and other natural sources being cultivated will not produce rubber for consumer use before 1945. This means a great number of Americans will have cars jacked up in their garages or, if they are old, will have sold them for junk.

Help the government reclaim all the rubber you can.

These are the sources of reclaimed rubber: Tires, solid and pneumatic, bike, baby carriage, play-wagon, lawn mower, wheel barrow, old tire patches, boots and reliners. Rubber soles, heels, overshoes, boots and shoes are another source. Hot water bottles and rubber gloves as well as bathing caps, shoes and raincoats also will help with the shortage.

Save the useful rubber you now have. Use your tires as little as possible. Make them last. There is nothing deceptive about the shortage of rubber. It is very real. In a year, many of us will be walking, or thumbing rides to work.

If this happens to you, blame the Japs—then throw yourself into the job of licking them!

A Nickel For An Anesthetic

IMAGINE an operation without an anesthetic. Not pleasant to think about in the case of a major operation, is it, particularly if five cents would provide the needed anesthesia?

That's a strong argument that was cited in Mansfield the other day in support of the United China Relief drive now going on in Richland county. Author of the statement is Col. M. Thomas Tchou, Chinese statesman and scholar.

One dollar would provide the anesthetics for 20 operations among China's many thousands of war victims, Col. Tchou said. Three dollars would provide one month's keep for a war sufferer, he pointed out. Every dollar, he declared, will come back to America one-hundred fold, in strengthened Sino-American unity throughout the war and in the days of peace afterward.

The committee staging the drive in Richland county under the direction of Allen Bond has set up headquarters at 37 Park avenue west, and invites contributions, which may be mailed or brought to that address. There won't be any house-to-house canvass, so if you desire to make a contribution toward the county's $4,000 goal, don't wait to be asked.

Eskimo Teeth

THE United States Army, taking its material from all available sources, now includes several hundred Eskimos. They are found to be intelligent and adaptable, and apparently will make good soldiers. But one thing is wrong with them. They have bad teeth.

This is surprising because Eskimos in the past have generally been blest with perfect teeth. But apparently the same thing has happened to them that happens to more highly civilized people. Adopting the white man's diet, with its excessive starch and sugar, they have acquired the white man's bad teeth. They were better off physically when they lived mainly on fish and meats, fresh or decayed, apparently getting therefrom the vitamins they need.

SAMSON'S HAIR?

Japs Now Talk of 100-Year War

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

Gloomy forebodings as to the future, rather than grim determination, are sensed by international diagnosticians as responsible for Japan's suggestion of the possibility of warfare's continuation throughout another century or more.

Nippon goes into a conflict with lots of pep but its staying qualities aren't very good, probably because its scanty resources play out pretty fast and it realizes that it's got to win in jig time or presently be licked flatter than a pancake.

The military crowd's completely reckless. Starting a fight's an almost overpowering urge with 'em, and, once in it, they positively insist on dying, in preference to defeat. The average Jap, though, likes to go on living as long as he can. And there are millions more average Japs than there are Jap militarists. The civil government (what we call the administration here) represents mainly the average, and perhaps would do it as per popular desire, if it could. The trouble is, however, that the militarists are at the governmental top in Japan. What they say goes—maybe not theoretically but in fact.

Accordingly, when they decreed war, in the whole country went. All availables were conscripted. Economics and industry were dictatorialized. All national life was made over on the jump.

Off to Fast Start.

Well, the militarists are efficient in their way. They were formidably equipped for the juncture and caught the United Nations off base in Hawaii, the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies and Australasia, scored tellingly in that area and doubtless stirred up plenty of enthusiasm for their cause. Yet it may be beginning to cool as their home archipelago starts to feel the pinch at the waistline.

The surmise is that the government's trying to pacify 'em—to assure them that the affair's due to come out satisfactorily ultimately even if it takes 100 years.

The original version was that the issue would be decided in a matter of months. Now a century's mentioned. "Let's keep it up until the year 2042 and we'll still dominate the world." Whether or not it'll convince 'em, I'm waiting to see.

The appeal was an official radio broadcast from Tokyo, anyway.

We've heard lately a deal about peace offensives, impending from the Axis powers. We're expected to look for 'em as offensives on the Axis's own terms. This Jap offering certainly isn't one of them—a peace to be deferred for 100 years, and then on the Japs' terms.

Nevertheless the German and Italian peace offers are beginning to be rumored as contemplated pretty soon.

They're certainly regarded with suspicion.

Nobody disputes that the Italians want to quit the Axis—that they're in desperate shape is disseminated, too, by Rome radio, indorsed by Duce Mussolini, and rumors are included that King Victor Emanuel is displacing Benito in favor of Marshal Badoglio, to take peace negotiations in hand. Nobody believes 'em, however, because Italy's as utterly vanquished by Germany as the rest of Germanly vanquished Europe is, and can't so much as peep independently.

Italy's Hands Tied.

Of course it would be nice to have Italy rebel, but what's the chance?—ask all observers.

That France, the Low Countries, the Balkans and the Scandinavias will tear loose at the first oportunity goes without saying. Turkey's sympathetic. The three real proletarians are Fuehrer Hitler, Duce Mussolini and Caudillo Franco of Spain, and they seem to be on the run.

How Germany will come out is problematic. It's had its traditions of democracy. The last war put 'em on the Fritz.

Japan, obviously, won't last long, after Germany and Italy are liquidated.

It won't string out for 100 years. That's a cinch.

Get Mad, America

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

GET MAD, AMERICA!
Bataan fell only yesterday.
American boys lie gouged by Japanese swords.
Democracy lies gouged by Japanese contempt.
GET MAD, AMERICA!
Cut out this "business as usual" attitude.
Stop whining about your tires and your oil shortage
And the fact that you're wearing last year's hat.
Wake up and stop being a fool.
Wake up and stop being a traitor.
What do our tires and bonnets amount to
When the world is crumbling!

Stop sitting in your comfortable rocking chair
And listening to the radio
As if this were another radio drama.
Stop huddling over your lunch pail and cursing
Because you can't have your whole Saturdays off,
For how many Saturdays off do you think Japan will give you?
How many comfortable rocking chair hours will you have
When Hitler moves in?

For don't kid yourself—
This country can be licked.
This country is on the verge of being licked.
But we won't be licked by Hitler or by Hirohito—
We'll be licked by our own complacency—
By our own smugness—
By our own indifference—
By our own selfishness—
By every contemptible, luxury-loving habit which we have accumulated during these last few years.

We'll be licked by congressmen who are too concerned
Over the fall elections
To make any vital decisions now.
We'll be licked because we have been living for 50 years
On wish fulfillment instead of hard reality.
We'll be licked because we've become a bunch of conceited smarties
Who don't know how to take it on the chin.

No, I'm not exempting myself.
I look tough and I talk tough,
But underneath I'm as much of a cup custard
As the next one.
I knew cruel hardship once,
But like any energetic American may,
I climbed above it.
I thought "it couldn't happen here."

Well, it has happened here.
Those mutilated bodies lying dead in Bataan
Testify that it can happen here.
Those bodies were our boys.
There was a sixteen-year-old youngster among them—
Just a little tad—
And how he wrangled his way in
I don't know.
But there he was, fighting with the best of them,
Starving with the rest of them,
Dying, I've no doubt,
With the scrap metal we sent to Japan
To pacify savages who have no pacifism
In all their barbaric souls.

GET MAD, AMERICA—
REALLY MAD!
Stop talking big and fluttering around
And playing at war games.
Get so mad that every vein and ligament and sinew
In your lazy, pampered bodies
Stiffens in furious rebellion.
In such rebellion as first made us defy England,
And has carried us victorious
Through every war ever since.

GET MAD, AMERICA!
This is war, really war,
And you are letting
Sixteen-year-old boys
Fight it for you!

SHAME ON YOU, YOU BIG, SOFT, FAT PALOOKAS!

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Trouble In Offing on Parts of FDR's Anti-Inflation Program

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Privately, administration leaders on Capitol Hill expect plenty of trouble enacting the two features of the present anti-inflation program that require legislation—the $25,000 income ceiling and reducing the 110 per cent farm parity figure. The leaders are acutely aware that a lot of congressmen and senators, loud in lip service to patriotism, will play petty, undercover politics on these two issues.

Toughest battle will be over the farm parity question, thanks to the powerful and well-heeled farm lobby, one of the most potent and grabbiest in Washington.

Within a few hours after the release of the president's message, the farm lobby was actively waging war against it. Secret strategical pow-wows were called hurriedly.

Representative Clarence Cannon, chairman of the powerful Appropriations committee, and a farm bloc leader, sounded the tocsin of battle on the house floor.

While the fighting in that chamber will be hot, the decisive struggle will take place in the senate, where the lobby has its chief strength. It was in the senate that the administration lost its fight to keep the 110 per cent parity figure out of the Price Control bill. This defeat was what forced the president to tangle with the lobby again.

On the $25,000 income issue, congressional insiders anticipate a compromise. A private poll of the house ways and means committee several days ago showed a decisive majority against it. Most of the committeemen favored boosting the maximum to around $50,000. However, because only a relatively small number of people are affected by the $25,000 proposal, and this is a campaign year, Roosevelt may be able to bludgeon it through if he bears down strong enough.

Insiders predict that a lot of members will back him on the $25,000 income limit in order to cover their opposition to reducing the parity farm price level to 100 per cent.

Tourist Business Slow.

Most people don't realize it, but the tourist business of the U. S. A. runs to several billion dollars. However, that business now is threatened with extinction. It's not only a matter of tires and gasoline, but the possibility that all non-essential private travel by rail may be banned.

Transportation Coordinator Eastman has warned that increasing pressure on railroads for movement of defense materials may necessitate this drastic step.

Surest way to avoid it, however, is to stagger vacations. Both government agencies and private industry should encourage workers to avoid the traditional holiday months of July and August. If everybody aims for a vacation in these two months, there will be no travel for anyone.

Soldiers' Pay.

The senate-approved bill to increase the pay and allowances of men in the armed services ran into "chief" trouble in the house of representatives.

The house military affairs committee finally approved a pay rise bill last Friday, but until then there had been considerable delay in getting together with the naval affairs committee on certain amendments, relating chiefly to longevity bonuses for officers in the higher brackets.

Principal bottleneck was Naval Affairs Chairman Carl Vinson of Georgia, who wanted to scrap the whole bill and write another.

"You fellows have the wrong approach," Vinson told the military committee at a recent closed-door meeting. "We ought to eliminate this allowance business and give the men in the armed forces flat pay increases, officers as well as privates. It's very simple. I could write a new bill in a few minutes on the back of an envelope."

Other committee members challenged the wisdom of beginning from scratch. They reminded Vinson that it took weeks of statistical study to perfect the senate bill; also that there might be a long delay in getting senate approval of an entirely new bill.

Finally, however, Vinson was given a week to produce a new bill. The next day he cockily reappeared before the committee, bill in hand. To everyone's amazement, it consisted mostly of the basic provisions of the Senate bill, including the $21-to-$42-a-month pay hike for privates.

The only major difference was a proposal to give officers above the rank of second lieutenant and ensign a 10 per cent pay increase and to make the 20 per cent extra allowance for foreign service applicable to all men in the armed forces, whether they had served abroad or not.

This scheme ran into a storm of objections. A majority of the committee contended that men with foreign service deserved more pay than those without it, and that if it wasn't granted in this bill another would have to be passed.

"All right, all right," declared Vinson, after a long debate. "If this bill doesn't suit you, I'll write another."

Committee members groaned. The Georgian already had wasted two days.

Dies Family on Payroll.

Representative Martin Dies has received a lot of publicity on his investigation of un-Americanism, but he has received no publicity regarding the fact that members of his family are on the Congressional payroll.

During last July, August and September his office force was composed of Myrtle Dies, his wife, making $325 a month, and Martin Dies, jr., a son, now in the service, making $216 a month.

On Oct. 1, 1941 Myrtle Dies went off the payroll for a brief spell, but Martin, jr., stayed on, continuing to draw $216 a month until March 1 of this year. When the son was taken out of the lineup by Uncle Sam, Mrs. Dies went back on the payroll in his job.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Get a crowd of Washington correspondents together these days and almost certainly the conversation will swing at some time to the change in President Roosevelt's mood in recent weeks.

Almost every press conference lately has found him cheerful and in good spirits—a mood that has been almost totally lacking since those gray days that followed the Jap attack on Hawaii.

It is almost a capital axiom that President Roosevelt wears best in adversity. When things are going wrong, he shoulders the load and seems almost to relish the carrying of it. Certainly there has been no war President who has borne up so well as President Roosevelt since Pearl Harbor. But until recently something was lacking. Press conferences, even those in which the rare bits of good news were given out, had an atmosphere of depression.

IT WAS something that could not be entirely attributed to adverse reports from the war front. It was something that seemed to flow from the President himself.

It is true that he was working prodigiously, but the President has always done that without losing his buoyant spirit or his confidence in the future of the United States. It is true that he was not always well, being twice threatened with those annoying colds to which he is subject. But sometime ago now, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, the White House physician, persuaded him to drop some of the late night detail work which was too much of a drain on even the President's great energies. Generally, his physical condition has been excellent.

Then suddenly, a week or so ago, the President changed and the new mood, or rather resumption of that old one which Washington newspaper men know so well, has been maintained.

There are quips again from the President's desk—like his solemn announcement that the planes that bombed Japan came from Shangri-La. Once more there are those little parables with which the President delights to clothe his news releases. Once more there is that unflagging spirit that seems to say if things are not all right they are going to be.

AND this change in mood seems to have spread out from the White House over Washington.

I think it would be wrong to draw any conclusions from this, to gather from it any false optimism. The task ahead is not becoming any lighter as the spring days tick off. The comparative quiet on the major war fronts is not necessarily filled with any certainty of a turn in the tide of war. No one of those few who have access to all the news are willing to say anything like that, so far as I am able to determine.

The importance in this change in the President's mood and its reflection in other places in the capital, lies in the fact that it exists and seems to be instilling in many of those who are giving their long days entirely to the war effort a new courage and determination which has not always been apparent in the months since we went to war.

A Farmer's Diary

Odors After Rain

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AFTER the rain last night I walked west on our gravel road and enjoyed the smell of everything. Delicious moistness was still in the atmosphere from the dashing shower that had caused a mist to spray a foot or more above the green clothed earth, like fog at the foot of a low waterfall.

That had happened before dark. Now it was night and still heavy clouds in the east were accented by playful lightning and rumbling distant thunder. The sky above was clear and blue. A brilliant star hung above the wooded hill. But strangest and most interesting to me were the odors that filled the gentle wind.

There was the robust, rain washed smell of looming woods-budding sassafras, sweet william, purple violet. Along the old rail fence, the odor of mould, decaying wood and pungent wild plum bushes, white with blossoms. Where the trickling stream crossed beneath the road, the odors of wet rotting leaves and cooler layers of fog brought a chill to the atmosphere. Occasionally a breath of wind from the orchards up on the more distant hills gave news of apple blossoms. A neighbor's spice bush made its presence known—and lilacs were growing near it.

I walked along, reflecting that memories of odors are entwined with everything we know. Sweet scent of clover hay always reminds me of when I rode with my father atop the giant load, as a little boy. I still hear the heavy clopping hoofs on the thick plank barn floor, and duck my head as we go under the big beam at the entrance. The sweetish scene of early bumblebees reminds me of the nests we fought and the sharpness of the bungers' sting.

And then from a plot of ground beside the road, I got a whiff that told me unmistakably that my neighbor had hauled out manure from the horsebarn before the rain. The scent was strong and full of lusty promise, not unpleasant to my senses or my sensibilities. I knew that from this animal waste would come the greenest crops the most successful farming.

COUNCIL AT SHELBY OKAYS NEW GAS RATE

Approves Ordinance Setting Up Higher Rates For Next Two Years.

SHELBY — City council last night approved a new gas rate ordinance setting up higher gas rates here for the next two years.

The new schedule was filed with the Ohio Fuel Gas company today for approval by company officials in Columbus. The ordinance becomes operative June 4.

Setting up a 71-cent rate per thousand for the average 5,000-foot consumer, the new ordinance replaces the three-year contract that expired last October. The old contract set up a 69-cent rate for the average user.

Council members in voting for the ordinance pointed out that it compared favorable with rates paid by other cities in this vicinity.

The ordinance sets up a rate of 20 cents per hundred cubic feet of gas for the first 500 cubic feet, six cents per hundred cubic feet for next 1,500 feet, 5.5 cents for next 23,000 feet and 5 cents for all in excess of 25,000 cubic feet.

Compared with the present rates, the new schedule will be an increase of one cent for the 700 cubic feet user and will go to an increase of 82 cents for the 25,000-foot consumer who has the largest raise.

City officials have estimated that the increase would mean an additional $1,800 for the gas company in a year.

Slacks Important Feminine Attire

Left to right: Pale lime wool gabardine slacks; desert-brown wool slacks; suit of off-white cotton twill with red braid trimming.

By SUSAN BARDEN

The girl who has always longed to wear slacks most of the time has at last come into her own, and even her grandmother can't say her "nay." For slacks costumes have graduated from the stage of being comfortable casuals to an important and practical piece of feminine attire.

Women who are working in munitions factories or other defense industries wear slacks to their jobs, so at the present time many of them are seen in town during the day. Now women of all types and all ages are wearing slacks. Some of them wear them only for a few hours when they are attending the Motor Corps or First Aid classes sponsored by the American Red Cross, hustling around making collections of articles for benefits or working on salvage projects.

Others practically live in them. They play golf in them and wear them when following golf matches on the courses. They wear them going to cabanas on beaches, on walks in the country, for motoring and for gardening, hunting and fishing.

Since slacks are here to stay, we thought you might be interested in some points on different styles. The mannish cuts are skilfully devised to straighten out hip curves as much as possible. Flyfronts are usually adopted by slim, tall women, the woman with an average figure generally wants a flat side fastening because they are more flatering, though some girls claim that they think the flyfront makes for a better fit in ready-made models.

In the above pictures three different styles are shown, so it's up to you and your shape which one will be most becoming.

Jane Withers is wearing an outfit that is notable for its meticulous cut and tailoring. It is made of desert-brown wool. The slacks have a flyfront, little pleats, and a leather belt. The coat is a boy's jacket with patch pockets and leather buttons.

Janet Blair is modeling a slacks suit of pale lime wool gabardine. The tailored slacks have a side closing and are topped with a yoked, collarless jacket showing the new attached belt treatment.

The third outfit is a smart suit made of off-white cotton twill, with red braid applied in a military band down the sleeves. It has a flyfront jacket and slacks and a red cotton blouse.

Clarence Netting Takes Huntington Girl As Bride

Announcement is being made of the wedding of Miss Margarite Wallis of Huntington, W. Va., and Clarence Netting, 56 Hoffman avenue. The open church service was solemnized Sunday morning at 8:45 before the attractively decorated altar of the Johnson Memorial Methodist church in Huntington. Two seven branch candelabra and ferns formed a pretty background for the single ring service.

Officiating pastors were Rev. Rolla S. Kenaston of the Johnson church and Rev B. P. Taylor of Kansas City, Mo., former pastor of that congregation. The bride was employed as financial secretary of the church previous to her marriage.

Before the ceremony nuptial music was played by the organist, Luther E. Woods, jr., and a cousin of the bride, Miss Betty Jane Brown of Huntington, sang "Because." Many relatives and friends witnessed the wedding.

The new Mrs. Netting wore a navy blue sheer street length frock, with light blue hat and navy accessories and a corsage of pink rosebuds. The couple was unattended for their nuptial service.

Ushers who escorted the guests to their seats were Clarence Withers and Paul Robinett, both of Huntington.

Mrs. Wallis, mother of the bride, attended her daughter's wedding in a light green sheer frock with black accessories.

Mrs. Netting attended Huntington schools and Mr. Netting was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school. He is employed at the Ohio Brass company.

Army Adopts New Brown Tan Tie

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

It seems I'm out of luck. I got some attractive neckties to send to my fiance for his birthday, and someone has told me there's a new regulation in the Army that soldiers must wear brown-tan ties all the year 'round. Is this true?

If he can't use ties selected, what would you suggest I send him?

SOLDIER'S GIRL.

I'm afraid you haven't been keeping up with Army regulations. Formerly soldiers wore tan cotton ties in summer and black silk and wool ties with the winter uniform. The new brown-tan necktie for soldiers and men will be made of cotton warp with a filling of mohair. It will be neither silk nor wool, both of which are scarce.

If you can afford it, there isn't a nicer gift for a soldier than one of those tiny portable radios with a replacement battery. I saw one the other day no larger than an ordinary sized book.

A sleeveless sweater is appreciated. If you send him anything to wear, be sure it's kept within Army regulations. The color of a bathrobe should be tan or olive drab. Pajamas are tan, navy blue or gray.

I'll be very glad to send a list of suitable gifts for soldiers if you will send me a self-addressed. three-cent-stamped envelope.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Since our separation, my husband was put into Class 1-A. When he feels like it he gives me money for the support of our baby. He wanted me to sign a waiver for him so he could enlist in the Navy, and because I would not sign it, he got angry.

I'd like to know if, when he does go into the Army, will I be notified and be able to get any money when the government starts giving compensation to families for taking men in Class 3-A. Also, why was he put in Class 1-A when he has dependents? J. H. S.

Evidently your husband must have said he has no dependents, that you were self-supporting or that your family would look out for you. The navy does not take men unless the necessary waiver is signed by the wife.

Regarding your husband's status as to class, get information at your local draft board. He's responsible for the maintenance of his child.

Sleep Is a Good Looks Guardian

By MME. QUI VIVE

Rob yourself of necessary hours of sleep and you'll be treating yourself meaner than old Pop Time treats you. That bright sparkle of the eye will depart. There will be no hop, skip or jump in your little footies Keep cheating yourself fof rest and, in course of time, you'll have so many wrinkles your face will look like an old walnut. I hope that throws a scare into you, you prowlers and night hawks.

We're not referring particularly to gay young ladies. We are including wives and mothers who never fall into bed until they're almost out on their feet There are millions of them. Their money fills the tills of beauty shops.

They're so tired they can't sleep. So they toss and fret. They're plain foolish. All they have to do is to have an earlier hour of retiring. Then they can have a leisurely bath, brush their glory locks, maul their scalps and cream shine their faces. These beauty rites are relaxing Strain eases up. Tension lessens. And goodness knows there is plenty of tension these day.

Outdoor exercise puts the poor sleeper on better terms with the sand man. The more fresh air she pumps into her lungs the fewer knot and kinks will she have in her nervous system. It is particularly necessary that a few hours should be given each day to pleasant pastimes. Gardening is one of the best of them.

To woo slumber one must relax. Relaxation starts in the mind. If the brain is chasing full speed, if anxiety or worry is present, what can you expect? You can't go to sleep when you're working.

Try deep, slow, rhythmic breathing. Count numbers. That will occupy you so that you can't think of the things that are keeping you awake. After a time the body will be limp. Or, if you don't want to count, meditate on pleasant episodes of the past. Go over the route to some holiday trip. Visualize places.

Get to bed before you are fagged. Have only sufficient covers to keep you comfortable. Have a good mattress if you have to sell the family jewels to get it. The two most necessary things in the home are good groceries and good beds. Don't economize on either.

Have a current of air in the rooms but no draft blowing directly on you.

Read a dull book in which you are not interested. In no time you'll have sand in your eyes.

Rub the outside of washing machine occasionally with oil to keep it from rusting. After using make sure that outside and inside of the machine are well washed and dried.

Seedless raisins simmered 5 minutes in leftover spiced peach juice or sweet pickle liquid make a delicious sauce for baked, boiled or fried ham.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

My throat muscles were so constricted as I heard Sadie's words that I found difficulty in uttering a coherent response. But from somewhere I pumped up the ability to croak, "What did Professor Diswell say to the man? Was he cordial?"

"He was more than that," Sadie answered. "The operator said he fairly bubbled over, he seemed so glad to hear the man's voice.

"'Shawn!' he repeated. 'Shawn Rue. Indeed I remember you. What—?'

"'You must not remember my last name," the man said quickly. 'Do not speak it. I am in great danger, and you are the only person to whom I dare to turn. Tell me who can overhear me talking?'

"The old man waited a little before answering. 'Nobody but the telephone operators,' he said, 'and they are a high class, discreet lot of girls. I doubt if they will even listen to our conversation.'

Kept on Listening.

"I guess the operator's ears burned at that," Sadie said, "but she didn't stop listening.

"'I have a private line,' Professor Diswell went on. 'It costs me a fortune, but it's worth it; and it has paid for itself tonight, if it makes you safe.'

"'It will,' the New York man said, 'and I want to ask you a great favor.'

"'Anything, my dear lad; anything in my power,' the old man said.

"'I know that,' the New York man answered. 'I have no place to go where I can be safe, except to you, for nobody knows our connection. Can I come to you? I have just about money enough to get there, although I can put my hands on more later.'

"'Don't talk of that now,' the professor said. 'Start this minute and come right to me. Do you know where to come?'

"'No.'

"'Go to the Grand Central station and take a New York, New Haven and Hartford train, getting off at Cornwall Bridge, Connecticut. If I am not at the train walk away from the track, around the corner to the right, then on past the postoffice. There I'll be looking for you. And—is there any way I can get you some money?'

"'Bless you, no!' the New York man said. 'I have enough for something to eat and to get me out there. Good-bye, dear friend, till I see you.'

"'Good-bye, Shawn,' the old professor said 'It will be like manna from Heaven to see you again. God bless you and keep you till you come to me.'

"The operator said that the 'Amen' the New York man said just before he hung up the receiver was like something said in church."

"My thanks to the girl and to you," I told her. "Some day I'll tell you what you have done for me. My lips are necessarily sealed just now."

"I understand," she said crisply, "and I am very glad to have been of service. Is there anything more I can do?"

"Not a thing now," I said "Thank you again, and good-bye."

"Good-bye," she returned.

Then, putting up the receiver, I sank back into my chair, my hands tightly clenched together, while I faced the tremendous discovery which her account of that nocturnal telephone conversation had brought to me.

Knows "Charles" as Jack.

For, just as the pieces of a jig saw puzzle fall into place when some key piece is discovered, the whole mystery of Charles, the carved ivory cube and Professor Diswell's queer behavior had been revealed to me when Sadie said the man from New York, wishing to reverse a call to the old professor at two o'clock in the morning, had identified himself as "Shawn Rue."

Now I knew at last the whereabouts of my brother-cousin, Jack Bickett, who sometimes had been called, half-jestingly, half affectionately, "Shawn Rue." He was sitting now in my father's armored car down the road caring for Professor Diswell, whom the armed bandits seeking Jack had so cruelly mistreated. And he was masquerading under the name of Charles, in the guise of the old professor's servant.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, May 6

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of dramatic and breath-taking accomplishments and adventures may make this one long to be remembered for its sudden, unpredictable and revolutionary denouements. While this may be spectacular and radical yet there may be solid foundations to put the achievements and good fortune on a sound and enduring basis. A solidifying as well as unforeseen and surprising turn of events may bring cooperation and friendly approval from those in power, in large institutions, political, fraternal or private bodies.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of outstanding adventures and experiences, bringing surprising and dramatic events into the business, social, cultural and romantic life, probably affecting the ture to a rather revolutionary extent. However, the sensational and unpredictable should have a firm and enduring basis, with the approval and support of those in influential positions. Seek these but be vigilant to treachery.

A child born on this day should be endowed with exceptional talents and versatility, having sound and practical capabilities as well as scientific, creative and romantic vision.

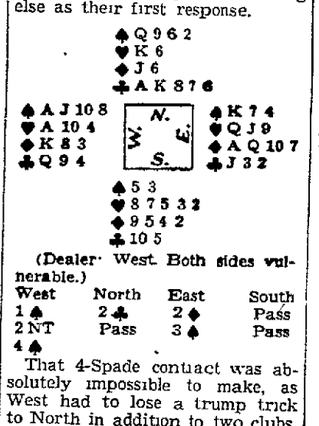
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

A GREATER ADVANTAGE

Many a good player will respond with another suit on his first turn and later support his partner's four-card major, even if he has four cards of the major suit, in order to show that his hand is pretty strong, but not quite strong enough for a double jump of the original bid There is some advantage in that, but probably not so important as the one gained by other top-liners, who definitely indicate only three cards of the major suit when they support it after having bid something else as their first response.



(Dealer West. Both sides vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ♦	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

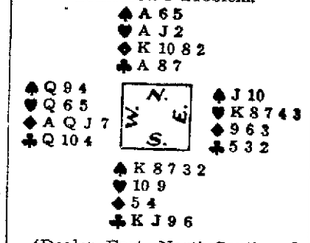
That 4-Spade contract was absolutely impossible to make, as West had to lose a trump trick to North in addition to two clubs, a club ruff and a heart. He and his partner were employing the method whereby a response of one suit, followed by support of the major, showed more strength than would an immediate raise of the major, but would not deny four cards of it As a consequence, West knew a little more about East's general strength than he otherwise could but had to guess as to whether he held three or four spades.

At another table in the same tournament, delayed support of a major was used by a pair to show that only three cards of it were held, whereas immediate support would guarantee at least four. The bidding there went exactly as given above, up to the point where East bid 3-Spades. That bid, however, let his partner know he had only three cards of the suit. West thereupon bid 3-No Trumps instead of 4-Spades, and made it. He won the third club, ran four diamonds, sent the spade J to the Q and K, took the spade A and 10, and the heart A was his ninth trick, making his contract.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer East. North-South vulnerable.)

If West opens this deal with 1-Diamond, and ultimately leads the Q of his partner's heart bid, how should South plan to make 4-Spades?

DAMAGE SUITS FILED IN COURT SEEK $22,563

Patrolman, Injured in Mishap, Asks $5,000; Man and Wife Sue Mansfielder.

Three damage actions for a total of $22,563, one of them filed by Patrolman Arthur Conrady of the Mansfield traffic squad, were on record today in common pleas court as the result of traffic mishaps in the Mansfield area.

Conrady, who was injured last Aug. 30 while investigating an accident at Lexington avenue and Edgewood road, seeks $5,000 in a suit against Lindsay W. Johnson of Columbus.

Mrs. Anna B. Rupp, Marion avenue road, asks $10,000 in an action against George H. Maxwell, Mansfield, for injuries she suffered in a two-car accident last Dec. 10 at the Marion avenue road and Woodhill road.

In connection with the same accident, Mrs. Rupp's husband, Herbert E. Rupp, vice president and secretary of the Gorman-Rupp company, brought an action against Maxwell for $7,563 as damages for Mrs. Rupp's injuries and loss of his automobile which was virtually demolished in the crash.

Patrolman Conrady, represented by Atty. Marshall Moore, contends that Johnson was driving at excessive speed at the scene of an accident. Johnson's car collided with another which had already been in a crash, throwing the second car against the patrolman, knocking out several of his teeth, fracturing a pelvic bone, and otherwise injuring him, the petition contends. Conrady was standing at the edge of the highway obtaining details of another accident when he was injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Rupp contend in their petitions that Maxwell made a left turn without signaling in front of the car Mrs. Rupp was driving, causing the accident. Mrs. Rupp suffered head injuries and bruises and lacerations on her body. The law firm of Henkel and Gongwer represents Mr. and Mrs. Rupp.

REQUESTS BAN ON LONG-TIME STREET PARKING

Commissioner Says Cars Left on Streets Hazardous; Law Under Study Tonight.

Prohibition of the parking of a motor vehicle on any city street in Mansfield for more than 24 hours continuously will be asked in one of several ordinances containing parking restrictions to be considered by city council at its meeting tonight.

Traffic Commissioner Frend C. Boals has asked council to pass an ordinance restricting long-time parking to give his traffic squad the authority to clean up dilapidated automobiles left on the streets by persons needing new license plates or better tires.

Boals is urging the ordinance as a safety measure, charging that the parking of autos for long periods is dangerous because of the many accidents which have involved crashes into parked cars.

The traffic commissioner also claims that the bill would allow the city to remove many "junks" from the streets, thereby improving the streets' appearance.

Other ordinances would prohibit parking on Library court from Mulberry street to Weldon avenue, on the west side of West Park boulevard, on the east side of Ausdale, avenue from West Park boulevard to Fourth street, and would allow parking for only two hours on North Adams street between Park avenue east and Fifth street.

Motorists would also be prohibited from parking on the east side of Bowman street from Sixth street to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks, on the west side of Bowman between Third and Fourth streets, and on the west side of Foster street between Park avenue east and Second street.

GET STATE FUNDS

SHELBY — Finance Director Chester P. Monn has received a check for $342 as the state's share of the poor relief expenditures in Shelby during March. The check represents 50 per cent of the relief costs paid out by the city during the month.

THUMBS UP!

On Sunday, May 17th, The Mansfield News-Journal will publish a "Thumbs-Up" Edition honoring Mansfield's men and women in Uncle Sam's Armed Forces.

In the "Thumbs-Up" Edition pictures and permissible information about the boys will be published. It is planned to use nothing but the very latest material, this in view of the ever changing military picture which affects almost every man in the service.

Because of the very large number of men now in the Armed Forces, pictures and write-ups in "Thumbs-Up" Edition on May 17th will be confined to men from Greater Mansfield including the communities of South Boulevards, East Mansfield, Lincoln Heights, Roseland, Coolridge Heights and South Hills. Men from Richland County and North Central Ohio rural and urban communities will be recognized in a similar way at an early later date.

The "Thumbs-Up" Edition will be a connecting link between all the folks here on the Home Front and our boys at their stations all over the world.

May 17th will be observed nationally as "I Am An American Day" in accordance with a proclamation by President Roosevelt. We believe that the publication in The News-Journal on that day of the pictures and stories of Mansfield Men in Armed Forces will provide inspiration of highest order for American Citizenship.

Mindful of the interest that relatives, neighbors and friends of Mansfield sailors and soldiers in the "Thumbs-Up" Edition a simple and practical plan for the collection and handling of pictures and information is herewith outlined:

1. For sending in pictures and information use the coupon which is printed below as a part of this announcement. The pictures sent in should, if possible, be of recent date. To print satisfactorily, the picture should be in sharp focus with no shadows across the face. Glossy prints are preferred. Pictures sent in are returnable. (If The News-Journal has already used a picture of the service man in question, this may be indicated in the coupon and the picture can be taken from the file and used again.)

2. The information about service men in the May 17th, "Thumbs-Up" Edition must be provided on the coupon blank which appears below with this announcement. It is probable that your son, brother or friend has been mentioned frequently in The News-Journal's column about our "Neighbors In the Service." That material will be disregarded in the "Thumbs-Up" Edition in the interest providing only the very latest information on every service man. Thus the blank must be filled out and forwarded to The News-Journal at once.

3. The deadline for both pictures and information for the May 17th "Thumbs-Up" Edition is Tuesday, May 12th.

4. Arrangements have been made at The Mansfield News-Journal to accommodate relatives and friends wishing to send the "Thumbs-Up" Edition to men at camp or stations abroad. Simply call at The News-Journal office, Fourth and Walnut Streets.

Fill out this coupon blank and send to the Service Editor, Mansfield News-Journal at once. Deadline is Tuesday, May 12th.

FDR Resists Pleas to Join Vote Fight

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT M'KENZIE
(Wide World War Analyst)

British occupation of French Madagascar, with two-fisted backing by the United States will boost Allied morale no end, not only because we have beaten the Japs to a base of vast strategic importance but because the operation represents the shirt-sleeve initiative which is going to win this war.

In itself it is a notification to dark-visaged, fox-nosed Pierre Laval—not to start kicking the Allied dawg around. Lest there by any misunderstanding in the mind of this Frenchman, Washington has warned him bluntly that any warlike action against the occupying forces at Madagascar will be an act of war against the United Nations.

Laval can scarcely fail to interpret this warning as applying not only to Madagascar but to turning the French navy and colonies over to the Germans. There can be small doubt he would like to seize upon the present incident to try to whip the French public up to the point of hostilities against Britain.

However they are strong for the United States and are well aware that their fate is wrapped up in the Allied cause. The French people on the whole are with the Allies.

The occupation of the island of Madagascar is the equivalent of a major military victory. The Japs apparently were about to occupy it themselves and had they done so they would have secured virtual control of the whole Indian ocean.

With Madagascar safely tucked away, the question will arise whether the Allies now will go further and take over the great French base of Dakar, on the west coast of Africa. This port dominates the Atlantic shipping routes over a great area and the Germans long have had an eye on occupying it.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

Although Artie Shaw's enlistment in the navy this week is not the first instance of a celebrity from the entertainment world joining up, it interests me greatly as a new phase in the career of this tempest-like bandleader.

Kilgallen

Artie, in his way, is the most vivid typification of the swing era that arrived in 1933 and is not yet over no matter what the devotees of waltz orchestras say. Artie is an American milestone.

His meteoric rise catapulted by that one sensational recording of "Begin the Beguine," his loud unexpected blast against the jitterbugs who idolized him, his series of romances climaxed by the brief marriage to Lana Turner, his retirement and flight to Mexico, his sudden return to the limelight, his marriage to Betty Kern, daughter of the great composer—in their way, all these were as theatrical and unpredictable and bold as swing itself. Artie's career was almost too dramatic to be real.

Artie's career was the kind a Hollywood writer might dream up but would never be able to sell to Darryl Zanuck. Its pattern is wrong for celluloid or for fiction.

It might, though, make the basis of a Clifford Odets play for the Group Theater to do with John Garfield as star—a play like "Golden Boy" more or less. For Artie in his way was the Golden Boy of swing—not more gifted than Goodman or Ellington or James, but with an unpredictable electric personality forever giving off moody sparks that blazed into page one stories.

No motion picture star looks more like a motion picture star should look than Marlene Dietrich. She's about the best definition of Glamor that Hollywood can produce . . . Best nightcap I know of at 2.30 a. m. is a banquette table at the Ruban Bleu with the Delta Rhythm Boys crooning their wonderful harmonies into the dim dim room . . . One of the casting jobs I am not in sympathy with is the selection of Ginger Rogers for the Gertie Lawrence role in "Lady in the Dark." I think Ginger is great as the all-American white collar girl; but Liza Elliott is a sequin collar girl, glittering and complex. Not, I would guess, Ginger's dish. Most patriotic sight this week was the cabbie I observed brushing off a fare on the night FDR addressed the nation, with a polite but unyielding: "Shh! Not now—the President's speaking."

Naval uniforms confuse me, I must admit. The full stripes and half stripes and stars and bars are something it will take me "the duration" to puzzle out . . . With vaudeville returning and a silent film called the "Gold Rush" making a mint of money, it looks like a return to simple pleasures and perhaps it would be wise for the sophisticates to prepare themselves for the pastimes ahead.

How good are you at quilting, or bean-bag tossing? Where is that old bundling board? Got any sedan chairs in your garage? Any good minstrel shows in town? . . . I'm sad that there'll be no roller-skating at the Rockefeller Rink this summer. There was something so cheery and relaxing about the whirl of those kiddish wheels on a lazy afternoon.

If there are any more gags about rubber, sugar, or the gasoline shortage, I think I am in the mood to pass them up. . . . I'll bet the Central Park hansom cabs will have a wonderfully profitable revival this summer. . . . Tony Bliss and Jo Ann Sayres make the handsomest couple Broadway has seen in seasons. ENFORCING OF 40-MILE LIMIT LOOMS IN OHIO

Columbus Hears Patrolmen Likely to Be Ordered to Insure Speed Cut.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS — A general 40-mile speed limit on all Ohio highways, to be enforced by the state's 300 highway patrolmen, was in the offing today unless motorists immediately comply with the president's request to hold down speed to conserve tires.

Many state officials are known to believe that more can be gained by voluntary cooperation in the long run. One state department director pointed out, however, that the tires may be gone before cooperation becomes effective.

Highway Director Hal G. Sours has the authority to reduce the present statutory speed limit of 50 miles an hour on any specific road or in any specific section if, after public hearings, he deems it to be in the public interest. There is nothing to keep him from declaring each highway in the state in turn as a restricted speed zone.

Addressing a transportation conference yesterday, Governor Bricker indicated that this step might be taken in an effort to combat the threatened rubber shortage.

"There is enough rubber on the nation's autos now to last throughout the war," he said. "But extreme measures may have to be taken to make the rubber last."

Meanwhile, Sours indicated that speed limit signs along the highways would be taken down and a last appeal made for voluntary cooperation.

Delegates to the transportation conference pledged full support of a program to eliminate rush-hour traffic jams through staggered hours of employment and to conserve rubber supplies through an organized "double-up campaign" to have workers share their autos with others.

Governor Bricker pointed out that surveys showed the average load of a car going to defense plants was from 1.5 to 3.5 persons in a five-passenger car. Both AFL and CIO spokesmen said that their unions would cooperate with the double-up campaign.

NORMANDIE FIRE JUST A GLARE

Firemen Answer Two False Alarms at New York Dock.

NEW YORK—(INS)—Fears that another fire had broken out aboard the capsized liner Normandie were aroused early today when the second of two false alarms brought five engines, two hook and ladder trucks, a fire boat, and a fire patrol to the former luxury liner.

Like the first alarm, turned in two hours earlier, the second proved unfounded, however. Several soldiers had reported seeing "flames" licking along the ship's side, and a policeman sounded the alarm.

Investigation disclosed that the illusion of "flames" was created by the glare from the furnace of a barge berthed near the Normandie.

THIRD BOMBER CRASH UPS TOLL

Six Fliers Killed in Oregon Bringing Northwest Death Total to 16.

(By International News Service)

PORTLAND — Names of six crew members killed in the crash of an army bomber near Baker, Ore., were disclosed today as army officials investigated this and two other bomber crashes which left a total death toll of 16 men within a few hours at scattered points in the Pacific northwest.

The six were killed when their two-motored ship apparently hit the crest of a ridge and bounced about 500 feet before falling apart 12 miles southeast of Baker. Missing more than 12 hours, the plane was enroute from Gowen Field, Boise, Idaho, to Spokane, Wash.

The dead were Capt. Harold E. Hammers, Spokane, Wash.; First Lieut. Wilbert P. Matthews, Floydad, Texas., Sgts Emmet Wheaton, West Los Angeles, Cal; Robert Massingill, South Bend, Ind; and John J. Carpenter, El Paso, Tex, and Corp. Carroll B Rettstadt, Rawlings, Wyo.

Gnarled wreckage was scattered over an area a fourth of a mile long and more than 500 feet wide. One motor was found more than 300 feet from the main pile of wreckage and one body was hurled more than 600 feet.

Four crew members were killed in another crash at McChord field, Tacoma, Wash., and six others lost their lives when a Boeing flying fortress, cruising low, crashed on a 4000-foot ridge near its base at Pendleton, Ore.

HOW ABOUT IT, MEN—DO WE WEAR CUFFS OR GO CUFFLESS?

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Gentlemen, let's retire to the alley to settle this cuff-on-trouser argument.

It's got to be settled by midnight Saturday, and we don't want our womenfolk saying "why, those fussy old roosters!"

Here's what the male civilian population is fighting over and for:

Men still have until Saturday night to order pants with a graceful cuff attached—from a tailor. After Saturday, cuffs are taboo by war production board orders.

A lot of men are hurrying to get in under the deadline. But more males are flocking in to have cuffs removed from last year's models. The fact is, say the leading merchant tailors, the new style is perfect and within a few months a guy will look slightly out of date with cuffs on his trousers.

But those who want cuffs are adamant. Some of these clients ask for left-over strip "so ma can sew 'em on."

Most of these complaints have come from men who have been buying cuffless pants from ready-made clothing stores, where the cuffs ban became effective last March 30.

The tailors were given until May 30, originally, to stop cuffing pants, but this order has been clarified. No trousers may be cut with cuffs after May 9, and none delivered with cuffs after May 30.

But here's the reason it might be well to settle the whole thing quietly in the alley:

The war production board has announced that bootleggers of cuffs would be liable to a $10,000 fine and a year in prison. That means, said the WPB, that a man who sews his own pant's cuff back on after May 30 is a bootlegger.

"Cuffless pants are what make dinner suits and formal evening clothes smart—they'll do the same for business suits," said one ready-made clothing operator.

"I tell my customers 'better to be without cuffs than without a seat in your pants,'" said a tailor.

DRIVER FINED

Damaged Car Leads Him to Court on Driving Charge.

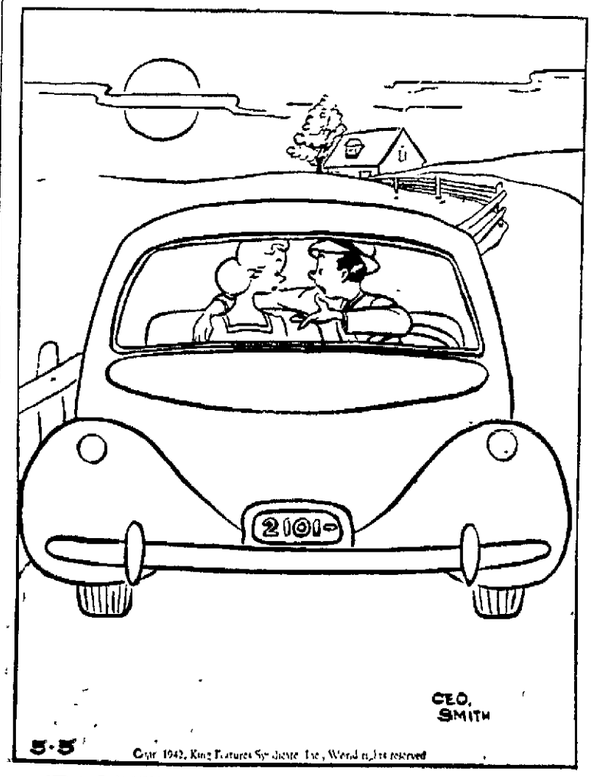
Traced through his damaged car which was found abandoned on Bowman street early this morning, Howard Culp, 13 Chester street, was charged in municipal court today with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch revoked Culp's operator license for one year and fined him $200 and costs. The court suspended $150 of the fine pending Culp's payment of damages to Orville Corbin, 465 Springmill street, owner of an auto which Culp allegedly damaged.

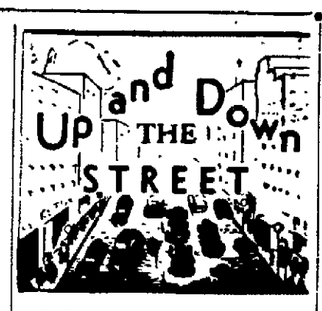
Police said today that Culp drove his car into the rear of Corbin's which was parked on Springmill street near Corbin's home. Culp's auto was found abandoned at 406 Bowman street with the right front wheel damaged and both tires on the right side of the car flattened.

Patrolman Clare Kyler checked the registration of the abandoned auto and went to Culp's home. He arrested him and brought him into municipal court where Culp entered a guilty plea.

Laff-a-Day



"But I MUST get home early. Mom sits up all night and worries about ME and pop sits up all night and worries about the car!"



Up and Down THE STREET

Writing from the west coast where she is on a lecture tour, former Mansfielder Mrs James R. Young says that she and her noted correspondent husband have been at Sun Valley, Idaho, for a week. While there, they heard Harl Smith and his orchestra. Smith, says the former Marjorie Willis, comes from Shelby while three members of his dance band—Paul Bragg, Paul Bergner, and Jess Hurley—are Mansfielders. The band she says has since moved to the Hotel Utah in Salt Lake City for the summer. In her letter Mrs. Young also mentions Mrs Charles Ackerman whom she saw while in Hollywood.

He left his pastorate at Mt. Lookout on April 27 to report for duty at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Miss Hester Robinson is in charge of the project.

Members of the Mansfield Police department aren't sure yet whether they are going to be able to hold regular pistol practice this summer as in previous years. Government restrictions on the use of ammunition may prevent the police from using the range on the Jacob Wolf farm on Marion avenue road. If they find it impossible to get new shells, some of the members are considering reloading the shells which they already possess.

PRESIDENT NEUTRAL ON BALLOTING

Wants Favorable Congress But Doesn't Care About Party Lines.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt was reported by his intimates today to be resisting ever increasing pressure from Democratic leaders who want the White House personality projected directly into this year's congressional selections.

Urgent importunings of state chairmen, senators and congressmen that the president take a personal hand assuring reelection of a Democratic house and senate in November to date has fallen on deaf ears, his aides say.

Mr. Roosevelt makes no secret of his desire that men be elected who are prepared to back up the government in its prosecution of the war, and who have a past record for support of the government in time of emergency, but he says he doesn't care whether the candidates who fill this bill are Democrats or Republicans.

Democratic state chairmen from some of the states where Republican inroads are feared have been seeking appointments with the chief executive. White House secretaries, apparently by order of the "boss" have been discouraging present bids for an audience, pointing out that the president's time is too occupied with the grim business of war to be concerned with partisan politics.

Mr. Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy in the first world war when Woodrow Wilson made the mistake of calling on the country to elect a Democratic congress. The voters rejected that appeal so violently as to return a Republican majority in the senate and increase the Republican majority in the house.

Four States Hold Primaries Today

(By United Press)

Voters of four states choose party nominees for offices ranging from senator and governor down to minor state posts in primary elections today.

Alabama nominated candidates for senator, governor, house of representatives, and state offices. South Dakota voters selected senatorial and congressional, legislative and local offices. Florida balloted congressional and minor statewide offices.

None of today's primaries, the second since the United States entered the war, produced paramount issues. Illinois was the first state to hold a primary election after Pearl Harbor.

Bricker Hunting Adjutant Again; Warner Says 'No'

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Gov. John W. Bricker started all over today in his search for an adjutant general.

Milo Warner of Toledo, the governor's first choice as a successor to Whittier S. Bird, rejected the position yesterday because, he said, he could serve his country better as a member of the state defense council and the American Bar association's defense group.

Bird recently was granted a leave of absence to rejoin the 37th Division for active service.

Last week Bricker appointed Col. Donald Pancoast of Cleveland, to succeed Bird as commander of the state guard and naval militia, but said he wanted the new adjutant general to be a man with less military experience who could devote his full time to civilian defense.

With Warner's rejection on the job, some observers felt that Bricker might be forced to obtain a military man.

"You should have been along," says Colony Recreation Manager Al Vogel, "on that trip of Mansfield high school's national bowling champions to the ABC last week-end.

"I never got such a kick out of a bunch of kids in my life, especially when they made their parade across the alleys at the state fairground Coliseum Saturday night.

"After their introduction to the crowd, and presentation of trophies, you couldn't blame them much if they were a bit flustered, and didn't roll such a good first game.

"But they were knocking over the wood in the second game. Scores were 727-926-744, proving they had a hot team capable of rolling the championship scores which won them the national title.

"Johnny Carr's ball was rejected by the ABC, and he had to roll with a borrowed ball. So what does he do but knock out a 223 in the second game.

The trophies won by the Mansfield boys are really something to see. On display now at Colony alleys are the national team championship, and Al Wooley's two individual trophies.

Vogel disclosed today that the great Strohs Beers bowling team of Detroit will roll in the Colony singles and doubles tournament on May 17 at 1 p. m.

Strohs will meet the Bissman Birdie Brands in a special match the night before at 10 p. m., and will stay over for the tournament.

Last year the Strohs packed the alleys with fans for a special match with Bissman's, and they probably will again.

And the Inter-City bowling tournament definitely comes to Mansfield next winter for six week-ends of kegling.

When votes were counted at Lorain Sunday, it was found Mansfield had won the next tournament by the slim margin of 12 votes, with a total of 100 to 88 for Warren.

Playing skins at Coolridge golf course the other day were Steve Stirtzinger, Joe Casper and Ray Malaska. Coming up to the ninth green, Stirtzinger was down for a gimme birdie, needing a putt of only a few inches. Then Casper sank a long putt to tie him, and Malaska sank a 40-yard approach for his birdie. Maybe you think Stirtzinger wasn't disgusted.

Reds Score Twelve In One Inning

Come Within 2 of Modern Baseball Record.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

BIG innings are one of the commonest occurrences in baseball and a well known "sucker bet" is that the winning team in any game will score more runs in one frame than the losing team will in the entire game.

* * *

However, not many innings will compare with the frantic fourth at Cincinnati yesterday when the Reds tallied 12 times against the New York Giants to come within two runs of the modern Major league record.

* * *

Up till this explosion the puny Reds had not made a hit off Bill McGee and were trailing 1-0 because a homer by Willard Marshall in the second inning. They made only six hits in the big blowup, too, but they scored nine runs before the Giants got a man out, everybody in the batting order came to the plate twice and they still had the bases loaded at the finish.

Everything happened, including a triple by Eddie Joost with the bases jammed, three vital errors and four walks. Three runs were forced in by passes and another by a hit batsman.

After McGee and Hugh East were unable to retire any of the Reds, Harry Feldman was sent to the scene and even though he proved little if any better than his predecessors, Manager Mel Ott recognized the futility of the situation and left him on the mound until the end.

This came eventually in the form of a 15-4 score and 35-year-old rookie Ray Starr's second victory. He allowed eight hits.

In the only other National league game the Pittsburgh Pirates pulled within a half game of the pace-setting Brooklyn Dodgers by nosing out the Boston Braves, 2-1, in a pitching duel between Bob Klinger and Jim Tobin, each of whom permitted six hits.

Cleveland's lead in the American league was shortened to one game as the Boston Red Sox took their second straight decision from the Indians, 11-8.

The New York Yankees crushed the Chicago White Sox again, 6-1, bunching five runs in a big third inning and keeping the Chisox shut out till the ninth, when an error by Phil Rizzuto after two were out opened up a scoring chance.

* * *

The Detroit Tigers maintained their hold on second place by whipping the Philadelphia Athletics, 6-4, witha 12-hit attack.

The St, Louis at Washington game was postponed.

Kuzava Hurls Mid-A Winner

Ex-Brave Keeps Erie Hits Well Scattered.

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—(AP)—The Erie Sailors, considered the team to show other Mid-Atlantic league clubs how it's done this year, still are taking lessons themselves.

They emerged on the short end of a 7 to 4 score with Charleston last night, second straight victory for the Senators despite 10 hits the Sailors picked off Bob Kuzava, former Mansfield Brave. But Kuzava kept the hits pretty well scattered while his teammates—Bob Tipton in particular—picked 13 off two Erie hurlers. Tipton had two triples and a homer.

Zanesville was pressed 10 innings to win 5 to 4 over a persistent Dayton club. Dayton tied it up in the ninth, went ahead in its half of the tenth, and then succumbed to a pair of singles and two bunts that gave Zanesville two runs.

* * *

Springfield shoved across one run in the eighth and ninth frames to whip Canton 2 to 1. Rookie Ivy Gibson allowed the Steel Town batters a bare three hits.

Providents Even Double Header

Blanked 6 to 0 on one hit in their opening game of the season, Mansfield Provident Loan girls' softball state champions came back with an even break for the day by winning the second game 4-3 over Cuyahoga Falls at North Lake park Sunday.

* * *

Seeman, a new addition to the Mansfield team from Fitchville hurled the winner in the second game, letting the visitors down with five hits.

* * *

The Providents play again at North Lake next Sunday at 2 p. m.

SHELBY TWIRLER HAS ONE-HIT GAME

SHELBY—With Bob Laubie pitching a one-hit game for the Whippets, Shelby high school defeated Tiro high school, 8 to 1, here Monday night in the opening baseball game for both schools.

Shelby took an early lead and scored in every inning but the second. This is the first baseball team of Whippets in the past 10 years.

CLOSE SEASON

WOOSTER—(INS)—With graduation and the end of the school term not far away, the Wooster Scots were congratulating themselves today on their baseball record of six wins, two losses. They downed Otterbein 7 to 2 yesterday after a six-hit attack in the seventh inning netted six runs.

Here Are Some That Didn't Get Away

Come on up for a fish dinner, I'll bring the fish. These are herring, pulled out of the Taunton river at Middleboro, Mass., daily as they beat up to the headwaters to spawn. Their destination? The United States Army mess table!

Boston Beats Al Milnar 11-8

Red Sox Hand Tribe 2nd Defeat in Row.

BOSTON—(AP)—It took the Red Sox to emphasize something the Cleveland Indians have been hoping wasn't true—that Al Milnar's pitching effectiveness is below par.

The Bostonians gave the Tribe its second defeat in a row yesterday, 11 to 8, although Cleveland had more hits, 15 to 11, made fewer errors, two against three, and accounted for all three homers—Jeff Heath's fourth, and the first of the season by Ray Mack and Otto Denning. But Milnar let the Sox get a flying start, and they kept in front.

Ever since spring practice began, Milnar's fast ball has been anything but that. In his first start of the season, the Tigers shelled him for eight hits in 5⅓ innings.

In his second try, Al won from the St. Louis Browns. Against the White Sox he lasted five innings, after which the Indians rallied to win. Against Philadelphia Milnar was good for 3⅓ innings.

Against Boston yesterday, Al was wild and ineffective, with the result that the Cleveland club's first-place lead over Detroit dropped to one game. In the three innings he lasted he allowed only one hit per inning, but the opposition scored twice in the first and four times in the third by cashing in on five bases on balls and a hit batter.

It was in the seventh, however, that Boston put the clincher on the game by scoring three runs on Jim Tabor's single, Pete Fox's triple, and singles by Bobby Doerr and Dom DiMaggio, off Steve Gromek.

Offensively, the Indians kept up their recent pace. Heath's homer came in the fourth, Mack's in the sixth and Denning's in the eighth, each with the bases empty. Four runs on five hits, with a pair of errors mixed in, made the eighth Cleveland's best inning.

* * *

Vernon Kennedy, who in two starts has won from the Browns and the Athletics, drew the Indians' pitching assignment today.

12 FACE BARRIER IN PREAKNESS

BALTIMORE, Md. — (U.P.) — A field of 12 thoroughbreds seemed likely today to face the barrier for the mile and three-sixteenths Preakness at Pimlico Saturday.

The probable field includes the Greentree farm's Shut Out, Kentucky Derby winner, and Devil Diver, Alsab, Valdina Orphan, Sun Again, Ramillies, Blue D'Or, Apache, Requested, Fair Call, American Wolf and Colchis.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—Baseball received its "green light;" similar go-head signals have been given to other sports—such as yachting, for instance—and now Jack Joyner, the University of Tennessee sports publicist, suggests that intercollegiate sports should be granted some sign of official approval . . . That might help the gate receipts a bit, but from here it hardly seems necessary . . . The army and navy have given college athletes their okay by grabbing up so many of them for such jobs as flying fighter planes.

Ben Jones, the same guy who put Eddie Arcaro up on two derby winners, took him off the third. When Eddie couldn't decide between Shut Out and Devil Diver, he sought Ben's advice and Jones told him that Devil Diver was considered the better hoss. . . . And Bill Whitely, the Greentree stable agent, has served in that capacity for the winners of three of the last four derbies.

Clevelanders Lead Buckeye Keglers

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Cleveland keglers are poised to carry the Buckeye state's colors to juicy awards in the American bowling congress tournament, which will end May 13.

John Stanley leads the singles column with a score of 756. Joseph Baldy of Cleveland and Robert Tritschler of Norwood, O., are tied with William Forslund of New York with 731 apiece for sixth place.

Walter Frey of Cleveland is third in the all-events by virtue of a lusty 1964. The Waldorf Red Band Beers of Cleveland holds down the No. 4 spot in the team division with 3091, while the Eddie Linsz Recreations are sixth with 3066.

Millers Revived By Fighting Spirit

(By Associated Press)

Minneapolis, after serving a term in the American Association bottom lands, is recovering slowly behind the fighting spirit of such players as Pitcher Mickey Haefner.

Haefner came to the rescue yesterday for a relief job in the ninth inning for a 7-6 triumph over Louisville.

* * *

The win pushed the Millers into sixth place ahead of Columbus and St. Paul.

Another one-point-margin contest was Kansas City's 2-1 victory over Toledo under the arcs.

Columbus' game at Milwaukee, and Indianapolis' doubleheader at St. Paul were postponed.

Others Toil as Athletes Play

And Covering Baseball Isn't Always Picnic.

By HENRY B. JAMESON
(Wide World Features)

ST LOUIS — Have you ever wondered how a big city newspaper gives its sports readers up-to-the-minute, play-by-play accounts of baseball games several times an afternoon?

Chances are you haven't. You've probably just buzzed through the sports pages without giving a thought to all the excitement, drama and downright labor that goes into furnishing fans the day's doings hot off the griddle.

The writer who sits in the press box at the ball park—the guy you've always envied because he gets paid for seeing baseball games — is only one cog in the machine.

Like the Army air corps which has a half dozen or more men on the ground for every pilot in the air, for every man in the press box most metropolitan newspapers—at least in the baseball circuit—have five or six "on the ground." the cost of covering baseball alone runs into thousands of dollars a season.

For an inside picture of how it's done let's go behind the scenes of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, afternoon newspaper in a city with two major league ball clubs.

The Cardinals are playing at home and the Browns are on the road.

A staff of at least 12 men form the baseball news "production line." Speed is essential

In the press box at Sportsman's Park where the Cards are engaging the Chicago Cubs two men are on the job—a newsman and a telegraph operator — reporting the game play-by-play.

At Comiskey Park in Chicago another sports writer, with a telegrapher at his elbow, is giving a similar account of the Browns-White Sox game.

On the receiving end at the office are two more expert telegraphers taking down the balls and strikes and passing them on to another sports writer who writes new leads and headlines for each edition and keeps the copy flowing to linotype machines on a special overhead wire-carrier system.

They work on what is appropriately called the "sports shelf," a balcony built right in the heart of the huge composing room.

As the deadline for another late edition approaches, our sports writer on the shelf dons a set of earphones; plugs in a special telephone loop to a linotype machine. The linotype operator also has put on earphones.

"Brown doubled to right field, scoring Moore and Slaughter . . . Mancuso grounded to Hack . . . Marion flied to Nicholson in right field, ending the inning. Two runs . . ."

Thus the play-by-play account was carried into type right up to the very deadline.

Meanwhile, another man up on the shelf was bringing the box score up to date. He is a printer who makes inning to inning changes in the box scores by hand so they can be slapped into the paper anytime. That's how you see box scores in early editions reading x x x "for three innings" or "for seven innings," etc. A copy boy records the inning scores of all the other games from a special ticker.

The makeup man, who like a printer can read type backwards as well as forward, makes a final inspection of the page form.

"O'Dea hits a home run with one on," yells the man on the balcony.

"O'Dea hits a homer," echo a dozen or so printers.

"Too late, all locked up," says the makeup man, with an air of finality.

"Rose O'Dea, Ken O'Dea, da, da, da," sings out the composing room baritone. They all laugh and go on with their work.

Downstairs in the news room still another man is handling the Associated Press bulletins on other games throughout the country.

TARS WANT HURLER FOR NEXT BIG GAME

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—(U.P.)—The sailors at Great Lakes Naval training station cheered baseball as a morale builder today but expressed hope the recruiting service will find them a pitcher for their next big league game.

The Chicago Cubs, first major league club to appear on the station diamond in 24 years, defeated the Sailors, 6 to 3, in an exhibition game yesterday.

Qualify For PGA Tourney

Many Big Timers Are Included in Lists.

(By International News Service)

Names of many "big time" golfers were added today to the list of qualifiers for the National PGA tournament to be staged at Atlantic City on May 25.

The professional golfers tournament this year will be the outstanding tournament of the summer since the National Amateur event has been abandoned because of the war.

Vic Ghezzi, Fort Monmouth corporal, the current P. G. A. titleholder, was an automatic qualifier but his presence to defend his crown was problematic.

* * *

Many of the berths were sealed within the past two weeks as several sectional tournaments were staged to enable many golfers to compete before entrance into the armed service of their country.

Those who qualified yesterday and their scores included:

Ohio: Tony Penna, Dayton, 142; Herman Kaiser, Akron, 144; Rod Monday, Toledo, 152; Bob Gutwein, Cincinnati, 153; William Barbour, Brecksville, 154; Verl Stinchcomb, Ashtabula, 155.

Rams, Senior Gridders Tie

Battle to 6-6 Score in Football Game.

Madison high Rams and seniors battled to a 6-6 tie in the annual football game closing spring practice on Madison field last night.

The seniors, coached by Bob Wilkins, scored the first time they got the ball in the first quarter. After making a first down on the Ram 30, they chalked up another first on the 20 on a run by Bell.

And Windsor scored on a wide sweep from the 20.

Late in the second quarter the Rams moved inside the senior 10 yards line on a pass from Hammer to Poston, but were unable to score. On the last play of the half, the seniors almost scored when Windsor threw a pass from his own goal line good for 40 yards.

Seniors scored in the third quarter, when Windsor galloped 50 yards, but the play was called back to the 20 yard line for clipping.

* * *

In the last period the Rams opened up an aerial attack of Hammer to Anthony which brought a first down on the senior 20. Attempting to bat down the next Hammer pass, Roberts tipped the ball into Anthony's hands, and he raced for the tying touchdown.

Recalls Wagon-Peddling Oil Days

Mansfield Man Retires After 51 Years With Standard Oil.

By ESTHER SMITH

The days of the oil peddling wagons which supplied customers with oil for kerosene lamps and stoves by door to door sales were recalled by Homer K. Cronenwett, 301 West Fourth street, today as he reminisced over his half a century of service with the Standard Oil company.

Cronenwett, who until his retirement last week as agent at the company's bulk station on Miller street, has watched the oil business in Mansfield grow from the days of the peddling wagon until today when gasoline stations dot almost every intersection.

He was honored for his 51 years and four months of continuous service last night at a dinner at the Greenlawn by Standard Oil employes. Seventy guests from Cleveland, Elyria, Lorain and other northern Ohio cities were here for the occasion.

R. D. MacIntosh, assistant Mansfield division manager, praised Cronenwett's long years of service with the company and the honored guest was presented with a gift in behalf of the group by C. C. Young, a salesman for the organization. A. F. Busch, assistant division manager, acted as toastmaster for the occasion. Dr. W. P. Edmunds of Cleveland, personnel director, was among the guests attending.

Cronenwett went on the payroll of Standard Oil when he was 14 and he never missed a pay until he retired on pension. His father, Charles Cornenwett, was bulk station agent then, and he gave his son his first job

Retired, Homer Cronenwett's going to "Take it easy."

The retired agent chuckled as he recalled the classroom incident that caused him to want to leave school at that age although he said he was "very embarrassed about it at the time."

"The boy who sat in front of me in school," he said, "had a habit of turning around and talking to me in an undertone. One day, the last day of school before Christmas vacation, I was reprimanded by the teacher because of the other boy and sent into the hall."

"I was so humiliated about it that I decided I didn't want to go back to school," Cronenwett added, "and when I told my father about it he said I had better go to work if I was through with school."

Cronenwett began in the warehouse of Standard Oil in January, 1891, and his promotion to agent of the bulk station in October, 1901.

In the beginning, oil was shipped in tank cars, Cronenwett said, and re-distributed in wooden barrels. The distributing station in Mansfield served an area within a radius of 35 miles and the barrels were transported either by rail or by wagon.

"You've heard it said that 'the mail has to go through,'" Cronenwett said. "Well, that's the way it was with the oil in those days. If it was not delivered people would have had to have gone without lights."

He recalled loading the wooden barrels of oil on bobsleds many times so that drivers could make their deliveries after a heavy snowstorm that left roads almost impassable. Sometimes it took five or six horses to pull the loads because of the bad conditions.

The veteran oil man who came to Mansfield from Galion when the first street car tracks were being laid in the city said he remembered the first automobile service station that opened at the corner of Walnut street and Dickson avenue. It was operated by Charles Hartenfels and J. V. Finney.

Cars had to be filled by hand with a funnel in the beginning and later hand crank pumps came into existence. Cronenwett said he remembered that in one month a station distributed 75,800 gallons of gas by two hand crank pumps. Now, he said, 20,000 gallons of gas a month is considered a pretty good average.

Speaking of his long term of service with the company, Cronenwett said, "It has been a pleasure for my work has been my hobby also." Then he added, "but it was good not to have to get up so early this morning."

He said he expected to "take things easy this summer" and do a little fishing. He has a cottage at Lakeside and a brother in Ludington, Mich., and he expects to visit both with Mrs. Cronenwett in the near future. "I'd rather drive than eat anyway," he said in anticipating the trips he was about to make.

DATES SET FOR JUNE SESSION OF CHURCH SCHOOL

Vacation Religious Training To Be Conducted at Five of City's Churches.

Dates for the Community Vacation Church school, sponsored by the Mansfield Sunday School Superintendents association, were announced by officials of the organization today.

Schools will be conducted June 15 to 26, with a parents' night, Sunday, June 28, at five Mansfield churches. Classes will meet from 9 to 11:30 a. m., five days a week, Monday through Friday.

Churches where schools will be held and the superintendents of each are Mrs. George Bell, Park Avenue Baptist; Mrs. Robert Morris, St. John's Evangelical and Reformed; Mrs. Charles Young, Union Gospel chapel; Adjt. Paul Hoffman, Salvation Army; and Mrs. Walter Coder, First United Brethren church.

Three courses for children in different age groups will be offered: nursery and beginners, age four to six; primary, first, second and third grades in school, and junior, fourth, fifth and sixth school grades.

Also co-operating with the vacation school are the following churches: First English Lutheran, First Congregational, First Christian, Grace Episcopal, First Methodist, Central Methodist, Free Methodist, Evangelical Congregational, St Luke's Lutheran, First Presbyterian and United Presbyterian.

The school curriculum is being planned by a committee composed of Mrs Albert Linder, wife of Rev. Albert Linder, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church; Miss Delia Evans, director of young people's work at the First Congregational church; Miss Elsie Smith, religious education instructor in Mansfield public school, and several Y. M. C. A. recreational leaders.

Additional vacation Bible schools being planned for this summer and their dates are South Main Street Evangelical, and Grace Gospel, June 8-19; St. Paul's Lutheran, First Brethren, and East Mansfield Presbyterian, June 15-26; and Mayflower Congregational, June 29 to July 10. Dates for the Grace Episcopal school have not been announced as yet.

Two meetings for teachers and superintendents of the co-operating churches will be held before the opening of the schools on May 18 and June 1.

THEATERS

Family Drama.

Judge Hardy enlists Andy's help in the court case of a young girl whose life has been made miserable by squabbling parents in "The Courtship of Andy Hary," at the Ohio. Andy squires the girl around from the time she is a wallflower until she becomes the idol of the stag line and then leaves her for his stand-by Polly Benedict. Mickey Rooney again appears as Andy and Donna Reed, a newcomer, has the role of the girl. Lewis Stone appears as the judge and Ann Rutherford plays Polly.

Comedy Romance.

"Sullivan's Travels," the Joel McCrea-Veronica Lake starring vehicle opening tomorrow at the Madison combines romance and comedy as a Hollywood movie director, with no knowledge of the seamy side of life, decides to become a "bum" long enough to learn something about it for a new picture he intends to make. Joel McCrea appears as the director and Miss Lake as a discouraged movie actress who persuades McCrea to take her along with him on his safari. "Torpedo boat," the second picture has Richard Arlen and Jean Parker.

Expose Date Bureaus.

An expose of the "clip joints" that provide girl escort service is made in the film, "Escort Girl," opening Wednesday at the Ritz. Betty Compson tops the cast that is largely composed of young newcomers to the screen. "Zis Boom Bah," the second picture, has a collegiate setting and plenty of music. Grace Hayes, Peter Lind Hayes, Skeets Gallagher, Benny Rubin and Skeets Gallagher, are in the cast.

Unusual Story.

"Man With Two Lives," the Park attraction starting Wednesday, presents Edward Norris in the story of an upright young man who becomes a cold-blooded gunman through a highly unusual circumstance. Eleanor Lawson, Addison Richards and Hugh Sothern are in the cast. Roy Rogers is engaged in western warfare in "Nevada City," the second picture with Gabby Hayes. The plot concerns an altercation between a stagecoach and railway company when a third party tries to show that both are bankrupt.

WITH REGARD TO A CARD OF THANKS

Very often a Card of Thanks in The News-Journal meets a need which can hardly be solved in any other way. Not only is it a gracious expression of gratitude to those who have sent floral tributes, but also courteously acknowledges the service and kindness of the many to whom a personal note of thanks cannot well be mailed, or whose names or addresses are not known.

A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone: Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

STOCK MARKET LEADERS EDGE UP ON BOARD

Ban on Iron and Steel Use For Civilian Products Fails to Cheer.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stock market leaders generally inclined to edge forward in today's early transactions.

Up fractionally at a quiet opening were U S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors. American Telephone, Youngstown Sheet and General Electric. Off a shade were Anaconda and Kennecott.

Market followers found little to cheer about in the step taken by the war production board ordering the nation's manufacturing plants to halt the use of iron and steel in the making of more than 400 articles for common civilian use.

Notice was taken of the federal reserve compilation disclosing industrial, commercial and agricultural loans of member banks in 101 cities dropped $143,000,000 during the week ended April 29. Heavy corporate repayments accounted mainly for the tumble.

Mayor Calls Upon Mansfielders To Walk, Save Tires

cessary to ride the bus," said the mayor, "but we might just as well resign ourselves to walking to work. If we don't start right away, we're just putting off something which we will have to do eventually regardless."

Mayor Locke said that the "swap-ride" campaign would be promoted among workers living outside the city. The mayor said that he would handle the problem along with the civilian defense committee and that no special administrator would be appointed as was originally planned.

"Swap-rides" will be organized through labor unions, according to the mayor. Union officials will be asked to urge workers in industrial plants to double up on rides, thereby saving on tire rubber.

"Defense leaders have repeatedly told us that the war will be won or lost with rubber," said the mayor, "and it's up to us to help conserve our tires for the duration of the war."

As County Registers For Sugar

The scenes above were duplicated many times yesterday at the county's elementary schools as consumer registration for sugar rationing started. In top photograph, Ann Verba (left) first grade teacher, registers Mrs. Fred Cahall, 65 Pinecrest. Below is a general view of the registration at Western avenue school. The registration continues today, tomorrow, and Thursday. Today's registration is for those whose surnames start from F to K.

17,205 Consumers Register For Sugar On Opening Day

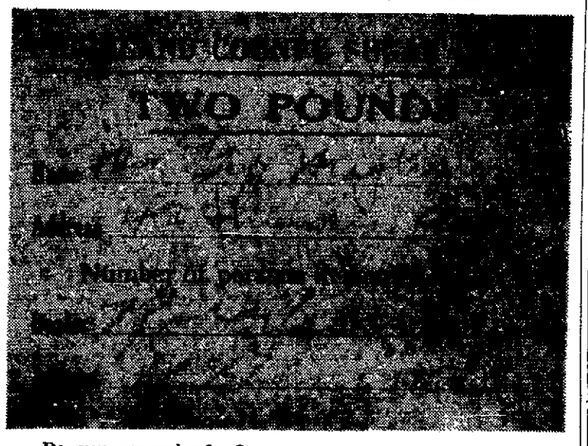
ed yesterday. Tomorrow's registration is for persons with names from L to R, and Thursday from S to Z. Mansfield elementary schools are open from 2:30 p. m. to 5, then again from 6 to 9 in the evening. Schools in the county are open from 3 p. m. to 9 p. m.

To speed the handling of Mansfield registration, W. L. Miller, superintendent of schools, announced that high school teachers will assist the elementary and junior high school teachers as registrars during the balance of the three days.

The Mansfield first-day registration totalled 9,740, and ration books were given to 8,968 of that number. In Shelby 1,507 registered, and 1,358 received books. In Madison, East Mansfield, Lincoln Heights, and Woodville, a tital of 1,521 registered and 1,193 received books.

Other first day totals reported today by James Bailey, county rationing coordinator, ars as follows (with district, registration, and number of books issued listed in that order):

Bellville, 558 and 530; Butler, 390 and 274; Cass village, 579 and 532; Lexington, 727 and 672; Lucas, 539 and 499; Plymouth, 300 and 289; Sharon rural district, 148 and 145; Springfield rural, 581 and 560; Union Rural, 520 and 478; and Adario, 95 and 91.



Do you remember? It was a quarter century ago that Mansfielders and others throughout the country carried ration cards in order to buy sugar. That card in those days was much less elaborate than the books with 28 purchase stamps which now are being distributed to the consumer registrants for sugar. The card shown above was used during the first World war by Mrs. George Hughes, of 42 Sherman avenue. She listed as her dealer the Robertson Grocery company, at 11 Benton street, now the site of the Blair grocery.

RAF RAIDERS SPREAD ATTACK

Blast Stuttgart, Skoda Works and Drop Flares Over Vichy Area.

back with a 30-plane attack on the English south coast, dropping incendiaries and high-explosive bombs on Cowes and Eastbourne.

The British air ministry said giant new four-motored Stirlings, capable of carrying eight tons of bombs each, were sent on the long foray against the Skoda works, in the second attack there in 10 days.

On the Russian war front, Adolf Hitler's field headquarters asserted the Nazis had beaten off attacks by "strong enemy forces" and declared that "several offensive operations by German troops for the improvement of their own positions were carried out."

With signs of Hitler's long-awaited grand offensive still missing, German newspapers took a grimmer tone and exhorted German war workers to speed up production for "a last gigantic struggle."

A bulletin from Red army headquarters said Russian troops "waged offensive battles on several sectors of the front and improved their positions," and dispatches implied that the Soviet armies had seized the initiative to break the muddy spring stalemate.

Defenders of long-besieged Leningrad were pictured as striking savagely at the Germans, a communique reporting that yesterday's assaults left "eleven hundred enemy dead on the field of battle."
